IN preparing the present volume the editor has received much valuable help. The Henry E. Huntington Library kindly supplied a photostat of its copy of the First Quarto of Cynthia's Revels, and gave permission to reproduce the unique leaf containing the dedication to Camden ; thanks are due to Mr. Max Farrand, director of research at the Huntington Library. Dr. George P. Winship kindly answered inquiries about the White copy of this play at Harvard and sent photostats of some of the pages. The Kemble copy of the First Quarto of Eastward Ho was collated at Chatsworth by permission of the late Duke of Devonshire ; the Britwell copy was collated by permission of Mr. Sydney Christie Miller ; the copy in the library at Worcester College, Oxford, was collated by permission of the librarian, Mr. C. H. Wilkinson. My heaviest debt, however, is to Mr. T. J. Wise, who deposited in Bodley for my use his copies of the Quartos of the first three plays and of the First Quarto of Eastward Ho. These generous helpers have enabled me to work out the textual problems with a completeness which I scarcely expected to attain.

Mrs. Simpson has again helped in the work of collation. For corrections of errors in the third volume I am indebted to Dr. W. W. Greg and Mr. A. K. McIlwraith.

I must again record my appreciation of the skill with which the printers of the Clarendon Press have threaded their way through the tangle of the critical apparatus.

IN MEMORIAM
CHARLES HAROLD HERFORD

WHILE this volume was in the press, the senior editor, Professor C. H. Herford, passed away on 25 April 1931. As long ago as 1902 the Delegates of the Clarendon Press invited him to edit Jonson for their series of the Dramatists; the formal agreement was made on 21 November. Herford felt unequal to the task of preparing the text, and early in the next year he made on behalf of the Delegates proposals to the surviving editor, who had been working twelve years on Jonson, to co-operate with him and to undertake the text and the commentary. These proposals were sanctioned by the Delegates on 10 July 1903. Slowly, very slowly, the enterprise matured, and the first two volumes, mainly the work of Herford, appeared in 1925. The fact that he completed his share of the allotted task makes it possible now to form some estimate of what he achieved for the study and understanding of Jonson.

Collaboration is beset with difficulties; rarely in the history of scholarship can two minds have worked together so sympathetically. A close understanding existed between us; it grew into a warm friendship. Since we joined forces in 1903 some two hundred letters have passed between us, discussing every conceivable aspect of Jonson's life and work. At first we differed on some grave problems—Jonson's authorship of The Case is Altered and of the additions to The Spanish Tragedy: we ended in complete agreement. We decided that, if points of difference remained, I was at liberty in the later volumes, and more particularly in the commentary, to record my dissent. Actually such points will be few and unimportant, and when it falls to me to weigh the evidence finally, some even of these may disappear. The only real difficulty that the collaboration brought for Herford was the slow progress of his colleague, who lost himself in a jungle of research. But even on that difficulty, which was serious, the sternest words that Herford ever permitted himself to utter were a protest against 'your impossible standard of perfection'.

His critical estimate of Jonson was the consummation of his work in the field of Elizabethan literature. The ideal he set before himself was, first and foremost, to understand Jonson's aims; then, and not till then, to sum up Jonson's achievement and to depict the man as he lived and moved in contemporary London. Jonson's society and the sympathetic picture of 'The Last Phase' stand out with a clearness which no other critic has attained. Robert Bridges once said to me, 'I'm afraid I don't like Jonson'. That has too often, but perhaps not unnaturally, been the attitude of critics. Herford did like him; what is more, he knew him. He recognized fully Jonson's limitations; but through them, and above them, he clearly divined the artist and the man. The strength of Herford's survey lies in its discernment. Now that it falls to me to sift Jonson's writings piecemeal in producing the text and incidentally to revise the commentary, I turn more and more to Herford's introductions for help and guidance. I never turn in vain, and I realize acutely what it means to me that I shall not take a problem to him any more.

His critical range was marvellous: he knew all the literature of Europe. He was a scholar to the finger-tips; but he was more. To accuracy and knowledge he added fine and far-sighted appreciation and the 'wide and luminous view'. Dante, Goethe, Ibsen, and the Greeks were as familiar to him as Wordsworth was or Browning. In these last years he said to me one day, 'I am reading the Greek tragedians again'; he used to get up in the morning and read them before breakfast, and I vividly recall his talks about the exquisite lyrics of the Hippolytus and the magnificent close of the Prometheus. To come in frequent contact with such a mind, to enter into its keenness and zest, to note

The critic clearness of an eye
That saw through all the Muses' walk, was an unforgettable experience. To know him—and I may add without hyperbole, to love him—was a liberal education. Life is poorer now he is gone.

Failing eyesight troubled him at the last, and he was under the shadow of a great bereavement; but his mental powers were undimmed to the end, and he drew unfailingly on his vast stores of knowledge.

Πρηύτερον γήρας σε καὶ οὐ κατὰ νοῦσος ἀμυρῇ ἔσβησεν, εὐνήθης δ' ὕπνον ὀφειλόμενον ἄκρα μεριμνήσας.

A life spent in 'pondering high things'—that is his truest epitaph.

THE TEXT: INTRODUCTORY NOTES

THE authoritative text for the Jonson plays printed in this volume is the Folio of 1616. It has been collated with the earlier Quartos and the Folio of 1640, and with the chief later texts. The following copies of the 1616 Folio have been collated: two copies in the British Museum, viz. the copy on large paper in the Grenville collection and the copy with press-mark C. 39. k. 9; two copies in Bodley, viz. the Douce copy (Douce I. 302) and the copy with press-mark A.A. 83. Art.; the copy in the library of Oriel College; and two copies in the possession of the editor. Full use has been made of Professor Bang's reprint in the Materialien zur Kunde des älteren englischen Dramas. Jonson himself read the proofs of this copy; all corrections that we have been able to trace are recorded in the critical apparatus.

This Folio was reprinted, with a few changes of reading, in 1640. Two copies of the 1640 Folio in the British Museum, with press-marks C. 28. m. 12 and 79. l. 3, and two copies belonging to the editor—one on large paper—have been collated.

The Quartos are fully discussed in the textual introduction to the plays.

To ensure an accurate text every available copy has been collated for those plays which were printed for the first time in Quarto and revised by Jonson in the Folio of 1616. The former were printed from Jonson's manuscript, the latter from Quarto texts worked over by him for printer's copy. But the Folio of 1640 is in a different position: it is authoritative only for the plays from Bartholomew Fair onwards, which were printed in it for the first time. It has not therefore been judged necessary to collate a large number of copies for the text of these earlier plays, which is substantially a reprint.

An ample collation of the Quarto readings has been printed to show how rigorously Jonson scanned every detail of his final text. But every jot and tittle of variation is not recorded. To do so would have swelled the critical apparatus, already large, to twice its size, with no gain to the reader. On the same principle no attempt has been made to secure a full list of the stupid blunders of the Third Quarto of Eastward Ho; it is a poor reprint of the Second Quarto. Such errors as the editor happened to detect have been recorded, and they sufficiently attest its worthlessness.

The following symbols and abbreviations are used in the critical apparatus for Cynthia's Revels, Poetaster, and Sejanus:

F1 = the Folio of 1616.

F2 = the Folio of 1640.

Ff = readings common to the Folios of 1616 and 1640.

F3 = the Folio of 1692.

Q = the Quarto (Cynthia's Revels, 1601; Poetaster, 1602; Sejanus, 1605).

W = Whalley's edition of 1756.

G = Gifford's edition of 1816.

om. = an earlier reading omitted for a later text.

not in Q = a new reading first found in the 1616 Folio.

corr. Q or corr. F is a formula used to indicate author's or printer's corrections, the earlier reading being indicated by Q originally or F originally.

In stage-directions add Q indicates a brief direction such as 'Exit' printed at the end of a speech and ranged with the last words: a stage-direction centred in the text and taking up a line by itself is indicated by 'After . . .' and the line number of the end of the preceding speech. See volume iii, p. xiv.

Words inserted in the text are enclosed in conical brackets, as in Sejanus ii. 267, 'You shall disarm (them) first, and they (in night . . .'

Words wrongly inserted in the text are enclosed in square brackets to show that they should be deleted: these signs of careless printing are confined to Eastward Ho. An example is in the stage direction after II. ii. 10 '[Securitie following.]' : he is on the stage already.

Eastward Ho

For this play the following abbreviations are used in the critical apparatus :

Q1 = the First Quarto of 1605.

Q2 = the Second Quarto of 1605.

Q3 = the Third Quarto of 1605.

Qq = a reading common to all the Quartos.

B = A. H. Bullen's edition in The Works of John Marston, vol. iii, 1887.

S = the edition of the play by Professor Felix E. Schelling, 1904.

It is instructive to compare the printing of the Eastward Ho Quartos with the texts which Jonson himself sent to press. They are hastily and carelessly printed, and in the use of capital letters, italic type, and punctuation they follow a different system from that which Jonson finally adopted in the 1616 Folio. Blunders in typography have been corrected, but the system has been preserved. Only such changes have been made as would have been made by a careful 'corrector' in a seventeenth-century printing-house. Thus in I. ii 'girt<r>ed' is raised to the dignity of a capital letter ; the punctuation of I. i. 23-6 'my mother's a Gentlewoman : and my father a Iustice of Peace, and of Quorum, and tho I am a yonger brother and a prentise yet I hope I am my fathers sonne : ' is simplified by printing 'Gentlewoman,' 'Quorum : ' 'prentise,' ; and the type of v. i. 25-6, 'Hunger they say breakes stone wals.' is adjusted by printing 'they say' in roman and inserting commas after 'Hunger' and 'say'. This is elementary proof-correcting, and, as Chapman would have said, it makes the text 'per-vial' to the reader.

Gifford's scene-numbering and scene-locations for the plays of Jonson and Bullen's scene-locations for Eastward Ho have been recorded in the critical apparatus.

CYNTHIA'S REVELS

THE TEXT

Cynthia's Revels, or The Fountain of Self-love was first printed in quarto in 1601. The publisher was Walter Burre, in whose name it is entered on the Stationers' Register in the following form :

23 maij

walter Burre. Entred for his Copey vnder the handes of master Pasfeyld and master warden whyte
 A booke called Narcissus the fountaine of self love. vj^d

Arber, Transcript, III, 185.

The title in the Quarto is The Fountaine of Selfe-loue. Or Cynthias Revels, and the running-title is CYNTHIAS Reuells', except on B 2 verso, B 3, and B 4 verso, which have 'The Fountaine of Selfe-loue'. In the Bodleian copy cancel slips substituting 'CYNTHIAS Reuells' have been pasted over this head-line on B 2 verso and B 4 verso; the Huntington copy also has the cancel slip on B 2 verso, but it has been removed from the other two pages. The confused form in which the title is entered on the Register cannot have come from Jonson; Narcissus is not even a character in the play. Burre must have made the entry before he received the manuscript. On the stage the title was Cynthia's Revels from the first, as is clear from the Induction, where one of the children points to it in the theatre.¹

The collation of the Quarto, A to L in fours with two leaves of M, is in detail: title-page, A. 'The number and names of the Actors,' A verso. 'Præludium', A 2 to A 4 verso. 'Prologus', B. The text of the play, B verso to M 2. 'Epilogus', M 2 verso. F 2 is misprinted E 2 in the Dyce copy. Normally there are thirty-six lines to the page, but D 3 verso and D 4 have thirty-seven, giving a crowded page. In the Huntington copy the last line of D 4 has been shorn off by the binder.

The presswork of the Quarto is very bad ; a blemish which strikes the eye on page after page is the crooked printing. Wrong founts are frequent, especially in the punctuation. The text was much corrected while passing through the press. Five copies have been collated for the present edition—the British Museum copy with shelf-mark C. 34. d. 1 (marked A in the following list) ; the Bodleian copy, Malone 193 (marked B) ; the Dyce copy at South Kensington (marked C) ; Mr. T. J. Wise's copy (marked D) ; and the Henry E. Huntington copy at San Marino, California (marked E), the last from a photostat kindly supplied by the Library. The Huntington copy came from the Kemble collection, formerly at Chatsworth ; it has the Roxburghe arms stamped on the back of the second leaf, and is, presumably, the copy marked no. 5221 in the Roxburghe Sale Catalogue of 1812. A unique feature of this copy is the leaf of dedication to William Camden inserted between A 1 and A 2 ; it is a remarkable tribute of Jonson's affection for his old schoolmaster. A facsimile of this precedes the text. It is very clumsily printed, especially in the division of the names 'CAM-DENVM', 'BRITAN-NIÆ'. Jonson evidently sent in the inscription for this special copy after the text was printed off, and saw no proof of it. He must have spelt Camden's christian name 'GVLIELMVM', and the periods after 'Optimum' and 'Ionsonius' should be commas. It is a duty to Jonson's memory to print a sound text here.

GVLIELMVM CAMDENVM,
 Britanniae Phœbum, Musarumque suarum Parentem Optimum, hic cum illis
 Benjamin Ionsonius, Alumnus olim, æternum Amicus iuuenari voluit.

Hor.—Non ego te meis
 Chartis inornatum silebo.

The terse Latin is alive with personal feeling. 'A pupil once, a friend for ever' is a beautiful touch, and so is the subtle suggestion underlying the quotation from Horace, 'I will not be silent about you, so that you are unadorned with a poem of mine.'¹ Camden was already ornatus: this was designed as an additional honour, and the pledge was nobly redeemed when Jonson wrote the stately fourteenth Epigram:

CAMDEN, most reuerend head, to whom I owe
All that I am in arts, all that I know.
(How nothing's that ?)

The choice of the word 'iuvenari' too is suggestive. Jonson took it from the Ars Poetica of Horace (l. 246), a passage discussing the language of the satyric drama—'ne . . . nimium teneris iuvenentur versibus'—which he himself translated later, reherse

Their youthful tricks in over-wanton verse.

The 'Parens Optimus', absorbed in historical study and antiquarian research, is invited to indulge in youthful indiscretion by reading his pupil's play—'desipere in loco', if we may cap Jonson's quotation by another from the poet Camden had taught him to appreciate.

The five copies of the Quarto that have been collated supply a copious amount of variants, which show Jonson's scrupulous care in ensuring the correctness of his text. He must have harried the printer beyond measure. The corrections involve such minutiae as setting right wrong-fount colons and marks of interrogation. It has been found necessary to annotate the list page by page. Two states of correction appear, but a caution must be added about them. In testing the readings, what appears to be the corrected form has been placed in the second column: for this purpose the reading adopted by the Folio is significant. But from time to time, when a correction was made, the type may have been disturbed, and so such details as a sound spelling may have been hastily reset in a less correct form. For example, in III. v. 4, the Dyce copy prints 'entered sir'; the other copies 'enter'd Sir'. Elsewhere on this page (F 3 verso) the Dyce copy corrects the capital of 'Sir' to lower case. But the insertion of the apostrophe in 'enter'd' is normally a correction, and it would have been accepted here as such if the Folio had not reproduced the reading in the form 'entered, sir'. It is possible that in correcting 'Sir' the printer disturbed the last letters of an original spelling 'enter'd' and reset hurriedly in a form which Jonson would not have sanctioned. There is, therefore, an element of conjecture in the order of the variants here presented, but, with this proviso, they are offered as substantially sound. Some sympathy will be felt for the afflicted printer, whom we have not succeeded in identifying.

This page was twice corrected: once to make the semi-colons uniform, as they are in the Folio; and, secondly, to adjust the original spacing of the Quarto in lines 37-9, which were printed at first:

score and eightene Princes Courts , where I haue resided, and bin there fortunate in the Amours of three hundred,

The last syllable of 'resided' was moved up to the line above.

	98	lifetime B, D	lfe time A, C, E
	103	himselfe B, D	him selfe A, C, E

Here again there are two states. The A, C, E group is obviously more correct. The correction 'should' in line 83 is accepted by the Folio: the 'would' of the Quarto was inadvertently duplicated from the line above—'that would indifferently expresse my languages'—the first 'would' being printed above the second. But this group has two obvious errors, 'Asot,' in line 73 and 'il'e' in line 74. In line 69 the substitution of the ampersand adjusts the spacing of the end of a line, 'what my father was, and'.

Sig. C 3	1. iv. 110	Ssr B, D	Sir A, C, E

	141	only B, D	onely, A, C, E
	142	virendi B, D	vi rendi A, C, E

A, C, E agree in their corrections of this page, except in line 120. Jonson at this date spelt 'humor', not 'humour', because of its Latin derivation; this spelling is found in the Quartos of Every Man in his Humour and Every Man out of his Humour in the titles and, usually, in the text. Moreover, in line 111 of this page all five copies print 'the humor of mine eye'. Probably Jonson made the spelling uniform after the rest of the page had been corrected.

C 3 verso has only one correction :

Sig. C 3 ^v	1. iv. 147	alltimes B, D	all times, A, C, E
Sig. C 4 ^v	1. v. 35	flesh ? B, D	flesh.' A, C, E

	56	once B, D	once, A, C, E ¹

There are some curiosities of printing on this page. The wrong-fount italic note of interrogation after 'flesh' in line 35 was picked out, but the substitute for it appears to be a period followed by an apostrophe! The Folio, by the by, prints a wrong-fount italic mark of exclamation. In line 38 Jonson must have written 'Floates (like a dead drown'd body)', but the Quarto dropped the second bracket, and when the absurd '(ike' was corrected, did not restore the parenthesis; the Folio prints the words without brackets.

There is one correction on D 4 :

ii. iii. 88 mouth, A, B, C mouth. *D*¹

The whole of sheet F is heavily corrected with minute attention to details of spelling, punctuation, and spacing.

With a few exceptions, the readings of the Dyce copy ('C') are corrections. The insertion of the apostrophe to mark the silent e in the last syllable of the past participle, 'resolu'd', 'receiu'd', speaks for itself: it is what we should expect of Jonson. He must also be responsible for changing the '-y' of final syllables to '-ie': in the author's corrections of the Folio text of the Induction to Every Man out of his Humour 'peremptory' was altered to 'peremptorie' (l. 74) and 'deformity' to 'deformitie' (l. 120) in Jonson's own proof-reading.¹ This preference for the '-ie' termination may be tested from the Induction to Cynthia's Revels, in which the Folio changes to '-ie' the following spellings of the Quarto—'trechery' (l. 25), 'Enuy' (l. 30), 'Auditory' (ll. 37, 201), 'Countrey' (l. 43), 'Mercury' (l. 46), 'any' (l. 47), 'pretty' (l. 52), 'Money' (ll. 73, 76, 117), 'Apoplexy' (l. 84), 'Society' (ll. 87, 173), 'Inventory' (l. 105), 'Memory' (l. 108), 'euery' (l. 181), 'Company' (l. 183), 'cary' (l. 188), 'necessary' (l. 191), 'twenty' (l. 212), 'Capacity' (l. 215), 'Corky' (l. 216)—retaining only eight of the '-y' spellings.² The printer is probably responsible for 'gentle' in the correction on III. ii. 34; the Folio prints 'gentile societie'. The Quarto elsewhere spells 'gentile'. The older English form was 'gentil' or 'gentyll', but Jonson is more likely to have been influenced by the Latin gentilis. The last correction of the Dyce copy is instructive: Jonson had put a comma after 'dos', the last word on this page, but the printer at first worked it into the catchword as an apostrophe in the middle of 'i's'.

A few points of punctuation were overlooked in the first

reading : two wrong-fount colons were afterwards detected in III. ii. 55, 60, and in III. ii. 22, 28, 'passion,' and 'Iests:' were corrected to the form in which they appear in the Folio, 'passion !', 'Iests.'

The Dyce copy again gives the first state of the corrections ; it is consistent in eliminating y spellings, though Jonson may have written 'Playes' in line 67 and 'eyther' in line 48. In the Folio text of the Induction to Every Man out of his Humour he corrected 'either' to 'eyther' in line 130. Of the four corrections made subsequently, 'Houers', in line 45, and 'paps', in line 67, are needed ; 'nothing.' in line 54 is reproduced in the Folio ; and 'Proteus' with roman colon, in line 42, corresponds to 'mensas :', in line 52.

So far in this sheet the Dyce copy has maintained a superiority over the other copies. Here it is clear that the latter in a number of lines, especially where the punctuation is concerned, yield the sounder reading. The commas inserted in lines 95, 96, 105, and 109 are clearly Jonson's corrections. 'Sixt', 'fift', 'choice', 'regard', and 'pursue' are the spellings of the Folio. 'Houres' for 'howers' in line 92 is also Jonson's correction, to mark the monosyllabic pronunciation: he made this alteration in the Folio text of the Induction to Every Man out of his Humour, at line 34, 'Yet, hourelly they persist, grow ranke in sinne,'. The change of 'lim' to 'limbe' is less certain: 'lim' and 'lym' are the oldest forms of the word, but 'limme' and 'limbe' are sixteenth- and seventeenth-century spellings. The Folio spells 'limme' in this passage. The spellings 'reguard' and 'regard' in line 106 are not easy to determine. Here, and in two other passages (ii. iii. 1, v. vi. 70), the Quarto has gu, the Folio g, but in Act v, scenes ii and iii, where the Folio is the only text, it prints 'reguard' six times.

This is a difficult page, but some corrections of the spelling—'coloured', 'proude', 'holde', 'pursude', and 'then', are authorized by the Folio. 'Pursewd' is archaic; 'then' for 'than' was Jonson's accepted form. 'Coloured' is confirmed by the change from the Quarto 'coullor' to 'colour' in the Folio at 1. iii. 29, and in eight other passages. 'Colour' is nearer to the Latin form. The '-y' and '-ie' terminations are printed in the Folio 'laterally', 'pliant bodie', 'exceedingly', 'ladie', 'courtly', 'pretty commoditie', 'any'; the Folio also has 'die' and 'haire'. In the matter of punctuation the Dyce copy is wrong in line 90 ('No') and right in line 105 ('alone?'); in line 79 'you,' is probably the second state, the printer taking out the wrong-fount period and miscorrecting. While it is unsafe to dogmatize about all the alterations quoted above, it is certain that the page was twice corrected.

The Quarto is printed in a type approximating to modern pica : the printer's stock of T's failed him, so he fell back on small pica for these at the beginning of seven lines. Of the '-y' and '-ie' spellings, the Folio has on the one hand 'aime', 'Enui's', 'memorie', 'thriftie'; and on the other hand 'day' and 'pyed'. In III. iii. 34 the Folio reads 'affects'.

The peculiarity of this page is the printer's scrupulous care to adjust the spacing of the words in the lines. The hyphen in 'dis-cloake'; the double p in 'vppon', in line 3, when the semicolon after 'Taylor' had been changed to a comma; the taking over of 'hath' at the end of line 9, when 'supposde' had been shortened and the capital letter in 'Passion' changed to lower case, involving a further adjustment of the next line; the shortening of the crowded line 14,

Asot. Yes Sir (pray god I can light on it) Here I come in to you by carrying over the word 'you' and then putting in an extra e in 'Heere'; and the spelling Alicandroes to compensate for changing the first letter of 'Daughter' to lower case—all these retouchings show a care for the look of a page as a whole sadly lacking in the general printing of the Quarto. The corrections are in the Folio, except the spellings 'vppon', 'Heere', and 'bin'; the comma after 'trembling' in line 21, where the Folio has a colon; and the parenthesis in line 24, where the words 'or by what other title you please to remember her' are fully bracketed. The half-erroneous, half-corrected 'enterd sir' in line 4 has been already noticed.¹ In 14 'God' for 'god' is probably a printer's miscorrection: 'god' is a frequent spelling in the Folio, as if the lower-case initial toned down the appeal to the deity in a merely vulgar oath.²

Here the Dyce copy is the more fully corrected, but it is impossible to accept all its readings. Did Jonson spell 'inforce' or 'enforce' in line 51? In the Folio he shows a marked preference for the prefix 'en-' in such words as 'enflame', 'encrease', 'enforme'. But the texts are inconsistent: thus in the Induction, line 54, the Quarto has 'informe', the Folio 'enforme'; in line 80 the Quarto 'encreases', the Folio 'increases'; in 1. i. 47 the Quarto 'inforste', the Folio 'enforc'd'; in 1. iv. 41 both texts have 'enforme'. The printer, of course, often interfered with an author's spelling, but when, as in line 51, we are confronted with a correction, it must be an intervention of the author to retrieve his own spelling, and we must decide in favour of the form for which he shows a preference.

For the change of 'Musique' to 'Musicke' in line 43, compare 'Phisique' (Quarto) with 'physicke' (Folio) in 11. i. 50, and 'politique' (Quarto) with 'politike' (Folio) in 11. ii. 42. Three lines, 61, 66, and 74, are adjusted on this page.

A few variants are found in the remaining sheets.

The Quarto was reprinted in 1908 in Professor Bang's Materialien zur Kunde des älteren englischen Dramas, vol. xxii, by W. Bang and L. Krebs; the reprint is very careful. 'Moria;' in the scene heading of Act II, scene iv, should be 'Moria', and 'twine' in iv. iii. 217 should be 'turne': they are noticed here because they have been taken for printer's errors in the Bodleian copy.

The Folio text of 1616 is a revision and expansion of the Quarto, a corrected copy of which was sent to the printer. The Quarto probably gives the text of the Court performance of 6 January 1601, as F. G. Fleay first suggested.¹ The Folio changes are of two kinds. Insertions are made to strengthen the phrasing, to work out an idea more completely, or to make the situation clearer; these changes are purely literary. There are also additions, especially in the fourth and fifth Acts, extending to whole scenes, which are a sustained satire on the Court. 'The knot of spiders', who filled the Court with their cobwebs, were handled trenchantly enough in the shortened version. But even Jonson had to put some curb on his censoriousness before such an audience: he not only suppressed a considerable portion of this satire at the Court performance of 1601, but he judged it politic not to print it in the text which appeared later in the year. He kept the manuscript, however, and drew upon it for the revision.

The bracketed words in the following passages, taken from the Folio text, will serve as examples of Jonson's minute retouching. In i. iv. 106-13 Asotus and Amorphus solve a social problem. Crites will not introduce them, so how are they to know one another?

A s o. Would I had but once spoke to him, and then—<Hee comes to me.>

A m o. 'Tis a most curious, and neatly-wrought band, this same, as I haue seene, sir.

A s o. O god, sir.

A m o. You forgiue the humour of mine eye, in observing it.

In III. ii. 28 foll. Hedon is angry that the Court ushers allow a scholar, 'a piece of serge, or perpetuana', to intrude among courtiers clad in silk. In the Folio, Anaides makes an exception: 'Vnlesse 't were Lent, Ember weekes, or Fasting dayes, when the place is most penuriously emptie of all other good outsides.' In III. v. 78-9, a reference to a lover's swearing by his lady's 'iuorie teeth', a 'white, and innocent oth', the Folio interjects a parenthesis, '(though they be ebonie)'. In IV. v. 120-3 foll., the page Morus wheedles the spendthrift Asotus: 'Would I might neuer stirre, but you are a fine man in these clothes. <Master, shall I haue 'hem, when you haue done with them?> A s o. As for that, M o r u s, thou shalt see more hereafter.' Here the guarded hint of the Quarto, 'Would I might neuer stirre, but you are in gay clothes,' is certainly neater, but for Morus, the son of Folly personified, and himself 'the Fool', it is, perhaps, less suitable. But the dialogue of Arete and Crites, anatomizing fantastic Court types in Act III, scene iv, is the most finished example of literary revision in the play; it is hopelessly undramatic, but in its crisp clear-cut portraiture it is a verse counterpart of the prose paragraphs of description prefixed to Every Man out of his Humour.¹ Here is a specimen:

There stands a Neophyte glazing of his face,
 <Pruning his clothes, perfuming of his haire,>
 Against his idoll enters; and repeates

¹ See vol. iii, pp. 423-7.

(Like an vnperfect prologue, at third musike)
 His part of speeches, and confederate iests,
 In passion to himselfe. Another swears
 His Scene of courtship ouer; <bids, beleue him,
 Twentie times, ere they will; anon,> doth seeme¹
 As he would kisse away his hand in kindnesse;
 <Then walkes of melancholike, and stands wreath'd,
 As he were pinn'd vp to the arras, thus.>

In this scene lines 22 to 41 are found only in the Folio and were probably written for it. Stroke by stroke Jonson adds to the effect, and the picture of the 'mincing marmoset, made all of clothes, and face', who dares not smile

Beyond a point, for feare t'vnstarch his looke, who has 'trauell'd to make legs', suggests the withering and concentrated power of Jonson's mature period. But, of course, this may be a stage shortening.

A similar criticism applies to the first of the longer additions in the Folio, Act III, scene i, lines 32-75. Here too the sarcasm is literary rather than dramatic. It is advice to a courtier how to exploit men of letters, to pick up their scraps of good talk, 'a new phrase, or an acute jest', and quote them as original.

A s o. But I shall neuer vtter it perfectly, sir.

A m o. No matter, let it come lame. In ordinary talke you shall play it away, as you doe your light crownes at primero: It will passe.

A long addition in Act IV, scene i, lines 136-214, satirizes Court ladies. No man with an atom of tact would have thought of having this delivered in their presence. But it is an integral part of the play. It ends with Phantaste's wild flight of fancy explaining what she would do and what she would be if she could have her wishes gratified; she would 'haue a booke made of all this, which I would call the Booke of Humours, and euery night reade a little piece, ere I slept, and laugh at it'. The book is to treat of the effects of love 'inwardly' in all temperaments and types of character, and also outwardly by rival displays of foppery and folly among the lovers. Earlier in the play Phantaste is the only character who escapes dissection. Mercury hits off the male characters, and Cupid the female, in lucid epigrammatic notices which anticipate the formal Character Sketches of the Theophrastans.¹ Cupid actually begins a description of Phantaste, but Mercury cuts him short at once, 'Her very name speakes her, let her passe'.² Jonson thought self-revelation a sounder method of unfolding this type of character. But it was prudent to forgo the exposition at Court. The ominous first motto of the Quarto title-page, 'Quod non dant Proceres, dabit Histrio', might be freely paraphrased, 'You can say things at the Blackfriars that you cannot say at Whitehall'.³

The largest insertions of the Folio are the detailed exposure of what passed for witty amusements at Court—the game of 'A thing done' and the fiasco of Asotus playing his prize at courtship. The first is a lengthy addition to Act iv, scene iii; the second occupies the whole of the first four scenes of the fifth act.⁴ The game of 'Substantives and Adjectives', which preceded 'A thing done', would satisfy the most exacting connoisseur in fatuity: it is a pity Jonson did not stop at this in his final recension. But could he have gone further at a Court-performance? Courtiers would be present who were proficient at this kind of amusement, in a form, we may hope, a shade or two less silly than it assumes in Jonson's caricature.⁵ But for a despised scholar⁶

¹ See vol. i, pp. 374–5. Mercury describes Hedon (ii. i. 40–69), Anaiides (ii. ii. 77–103), Amorphus, and incidentally Asotus (ii. iii. 81–118); Cupid describes Argurion (ib., 164–85), Moria (ii. iv. 11–28), and Philautia (ib., 35–47). Contrasted with these is the idealized portrait of Crites (ii. iii. 123–45). ² ii. iv. 99–102.

⁴ Two inserted passages in Act iv, scene v, lines 76–100, and 142–51, are preparatory to this.

⁵ Compare the satire on the elaborate preparation for compliments in Act ii, scene ii.

⁶ See Induction, 85–7, 'a retired scholler there, you would not wish a thing to be better contemn'd of a societie of gallants, then it is'; v. iv. 25–6, 'he is a scholer . . . You may disgrace him here, with to depict it as silly would be insufferable. On the other hand, it is incredible that, when Jonson in later life was preparing the Folio for the press, he laboriously composed as an historic afterthought a ponderous reinforcement of his original plan.

A slight confirmation of this view is to be found in the form in which 'A thing done' is printed in the Folio. Usually in this text Jonson rigidly prunes the capital letters and the italic type so lavishly used in the Quarto. The context offers a good illustration from the two texts of the game of substantives and adjectives (iv. iii. 88-159): the only epithet consistently italicized in the Folio is 'Pythagoricall'; in seventeenth-century printing this is a normal usage for an adjective derived from a person's name. But in the Folio text of 'A thing done' (ibid., 160-94) the catchwords, 'Who did it?' and so forth, and the sub-title, 'the Crab', are all italicized. The printer's copy here corresponds with that which was used for the Quarto; it suggests that Jonson was filling in a gap from his old manuscript of 1601.

Two omissions from the Quarto text are, for different reasons, significant.¹ Describing the personification of shamelessness, Anaiides, Jonson wrote originally, 'he has two essentiall parts of the Courtier, Pride and Ignoraunce (I meane of such a Courtier, who is (indeed) but the Zani to an exact Courtier) mary, the rest come somewhat after the Ordinary Gallant. Tis Impudence itself Anaiides' (ii. ii. 77-9). He shortened this in the Folio: 'he has two essentiall parts of the courtier, pride, and ignorance; mary, the rest come somewhat after the ordinarie gallant. Tis impudence it selfe, A N A I D E S.' Later in the play Jonson did recognize the existence of authoritie'; ib., 68-73 'This hath discountenanc'd our Scholaris, most richly . . . make it knowne how bitter a thing it is, not to bee look't on in court'.

(v. i. 30-1)

but this scene was not in the Quarto. We may infer from Dekker's racy thrust in Satiro-mastix (I 3 verso) —'thy sputtering chappes yelp, that Arrogance, and Impudence, and Ignorance, are the essentiall parts of a Courtier'—that the insult went home; and, when once the words were quoted against him, Jonson, always impervious to criticism, retained the taunt and withdrew the qualification.

The other omission wrecks the grammar of iv. iii. 274-5. In the Folio the words '(retyring my selfe into a bay-window) the beauteous ladie ANNABELL . . .' have no construction: the Quarto reads '(retiring my selfe into a Bay-window) I encountred the Lady Annabel'. Either the omission is accidental, or Jonson began to retouch the passage—he inserted the epithet 'beauteous', for example—and did not complete the revision.

The Folio text was carefully reprinted by Professor W. Bang in two sections of the seventh volume of the Materialien zur Kunde des älteren englischen Dramas, issued at Louvain in 1905 and 1908. Dr. Alexander C. Judson also reprinted the Folio in Yale Studies in English, vol. xlv, in 1912. His text is extremely accurate, and he discusses fully the changes and additions made in the Folio when Jonson revised the text. He argues that the large additions were a later revision by Jonson of his original Quarto text. In preparing his edition, Dr. Judson used the copy in the Yale University library, and collated with it a copy belonging to Professor William Lyon Phelps and Professor Bang's text and collations.¹ He printed a list of the variant readings of these copies, and in his own edition used the corrected sheets. He notes that the Folio text occasionally exhibits two states of correction, and sees Jonson's own hand in the minute and systematic improvements.

The Folio of 1640 reprints the text of the 1616 Folio, usually from the corrected sheets.¹ It has a few errors: 'render' for 'tender' in I. iii. 32; 'blushing' for 'blushingly' in II. ii. 36; 'an' for 'and' in II. ii. 66; 'as' for 'of' in III. iv. 64; 'continence' for 'conniue' in V. xi. 64. On the other hand there are occasional traces of a revised punctuation. In I. i. 42 'So HERCVLES might challenge prioritie of vs both' a Jonsonian comma is inserted in the 1640 text after 'HERCVLES'. An exact parallel to this is given by the Quarto text of V. xi. 38, 'Yeares, are beneath the Sphears', where the 1616 text drops the comma. The 1640 text also makes a freer use of the semicolon where it is more logical than the comma. A good example is Argurion's comment on Asotus, 'In good faith, I like the citizens sonne there, ASOTVS, mee thinkes, none of hem all come neere him' (IV. i. 91-3). Argurion is speaking deliberately, so the substitution of a semicolon for the comma after 'ASOTVS' is justified.

*THou art a bountifull, and braue spring : and 5 waterest all the noble plants of this Iland. In thee, the whole Kingdome dresseth it selfe, and is ambitious to vse thee as her glasse. Beware, then, thou render mens figures truly, and teach them no lesse to hate their deformities, then to loue their formes : 10
For, to grace, there should come reuerence ; and no man can call that louely, which is not also venerable.
It is not pould'ring, perfuming, and euery day smelling of the taylor, that conuerteth to a beautiful

It is in the generall behalfe of this faire societie here, that I am to speake, at least the more iudicious part of it, which seemes much distasted with the immodest and obscene 175 writing of manie, in their playes. Besides, they could wish, your Poets would leaue to bee promoters of other mens iests, and to way-lay all the stale apothegmes, or olde bookes, they can heare of (in print, or otherwise) to farce their Scenes withall. PROLOGVE.

IF gracious silence, sweet attention,
 Quicke sight, and quicker apprehension,
 (The lights of iudgements throne) shine any where ;
 Our doubtfull authour hopes this is their sphere.
 And therefore opens he himselfe to those ; 5
 To other weaker beames, his labours close :
 As loth to prostitute their virgin straine,
 To eu'rie vulgar, and adult'rate braine.
 In this alone, his M v s e her sweetnesse hath,
 Shee shunnes the print of any beaten path ; 10
 And proues new wayes to come to learned eares :
 Pied ignorance she neither loues, nor feares.
 Nor hunts she after popular applause,
 Or fomie praise, that drops from common iawes :
 The garland that she weares, their hands must twine, 15
 Who can both censure, vnderstand, define
 What merit is : Then cast those piercing raies,
 Round as a crowne, in stead of honour'd bayes,
 About his poesie ; which (he knowes) affoord
 Words, aboue action : matter, aboue words. 20

C V P. Faith (to recouer thy good thoughts) I'le discouer ⁹⁰ my whole proiect. The Huntresse, and Queene of these groues, D I A N A (in regard of some black and enuious slanders hourelly breath'd against her, for her diuine iustice on A C T E O N, as shee pretends) hath here in the vale of Gargaphy, proclaim'd a solemne reuells, which (her god-head ⁹⁵ put off) shee will descend to grace, with the full and royall expence of one of her cleerest moones : In which time, it shall bee lawfull for all sorts of ingenuous persons, to visit her palace, to court her N Y M P H E S, to exercise all varietie of generous and noble pastimes, as well to intimate how farre ¹⁰⁰ shee treads such malicious imputations beneath her, as also to shew how cleere her beauties are from the least wrinkle of austerity, they may be charg'd with.

M E R. But, what is all this to C V P I D ?

C V P. Here doe I meane to put off the title of a god, and ¹⁰⁵ take the habite of a page, in which disguise (during the interim of these reuells) I will get to follow some one of D I A N A E S maides, where (if my bow hold, and my shafts flie but with halfe the willingnesse, and aime they are directed) I doubt not, but I shall really redeeme the minutes ¹¹⁰ I haue lost, by their so long and ouer-nice proscription of my deitie, from their court.

M E R. Pursue it (diuine C V P I D) it will be rare.

C V P. But will H E R M E S second me ?

AMO. What say you to your HELICON?

CR I. O, the MVSES well! that's euer excepted.

ASO. Metheglin! what's that, sir? may I be so audacious to demand?

AMO. A kind of greeke wine I haue met with, sir, in my trauailes: it is the same that DEMOSTHENES vsually 15 drunke, in the composure of all his exquisite, and mellifluous orations.

CR I. That's to be argued (AMORPHVS) if we may credit LVCIAN, who in his Encomio Demosthenis affirms, hee neuer drunke but water in any of his compositions.

20 AMO. LVCIAN is absurd, hee knew nothing: I will beleue mine owne trauailes, before all the LVCIANS of Europe. He doth feed you with fittons, figments, and leasings.

M E R. Fye no : himselfe is a rimer, and that's a thought better then a poet. He is not lightly within to his mercer, no, though he come when he takes physicke, which is com- 50 monly after his play. He beates a tailour very well, but a stocking-seller admirably : and so consequently any one hee owes monie too, that dares not resist him. Hee neuer makes generall inuitement, but against the publishing of a new sute, marie then, you shall haue more drawne to his 55 for that fore-noone to shew. He's thought a verie necessarie 60

He courts ladies with how many great horse he hath rid

Hee is a great proficient in all the illiberall sciences, as cheating, drinking, swaggering, whoring, and such like: neuer kneeles but to pledge healths, nor prayes but for a pipe of pudding tabacco. He wil blaspheme in his shirt. The othes which hee vomits at 95 one supper, would maintaine a towne of garrison in good swearing a tweluc-moneth. One other genuine qualitie he has, which crownes all these, and that is this: to a friend in want, hee will not depart with the waight of a soldred groat, lest the world might censure him prodigall, or report 100 him a gull: mary, to his cockatrice, or punquetto, halfe a dozen taffata gownes, or sattin kirtles, in a paire or two of moneths, why they are nothing.

A M O. Plant your selfe there, sir : and obserue me. You shall now, as well be the ocular, as the eare-witnesse, how cleerly I can refell that paradox, or rather pseudodox, of those, which hold the face to be the index of the mind, which 15 (I assure you) is not so, in any politique creature : for instance. I will now giue you the particular, and distinct face of euery your most noted species of persons, as your marchant, your scholer, your souldier, your lawyer, courtier, &c. and each of these so truly, as you would sweare, but that 20 your eye shal see the variation of the lineament, it were my most proper, and genuine aspect. First, for your marchant, or citie-face, 'tis thus, a dull, plodding face, still looking in a direct line, forward : there is no great matter in this face. Then haue you your students, or academique face, which is 25 here, an honest, simple, and methodicall face : but somewhat more spread then the former. The third is your souldiers face, a menacing, and astounding face, that looks broad, and bigge : the grace of this face consisteth much in a beard. The anti-face to this, is your lawyers face, a con-
30 tracted, subtile, and intricate face, full of quirkes, and turnings, a labyrinthæan face, now angularly, now circularly, euery way aspected. Next is your statists face, a serious, solemne, and supercilious face, full of formall, and square grautie, the eye (for the most part) deeply and artificially shadow'd : there is great iudgement required in the making 35 of this face. But now, to come to your face of faces, or courtiers face, tis of three sorts, according to our subdiuision of a courtier, elementarie, practique, and theorique. Your courtier theorique, is hee, that hath arriu'd to his fardest, and doth now know the court, rather by speculation, then 40 practice ; and this is his face : a fastidious, and oblique face, that lookes, as it went with a vice, and were screw'd thus. Your courtier practike, is he, that is yet in his path, his course, his way, & hath not toucht the puntilio, or point of his hopes ; his face is here : a most promising, open, 45 smooth, and ouer-flowing face, that seemes as it would runne, and powre it selfe into you. Somewhat a northerly face. Your courtier elementarie, is one but newly enter'd, or as it were in the alphabet, or ut-re-mi-fa-sol-la of courtship. Note well this face, for it is this you must practice. 50

A s o. Ile practice 'hem all, if you please, sir.

A m o. I, hereafter you may : and it will not be altogether an vngratefull study. For, let your soule be assur'd of this (in any ranke, or profession what-euer) the more generall, or maior part of opinion goes with the face, and (simply) 55 respects nothing else. Therefore, if that can be made exactly, curiously, exquisitely, thorowly, it is inough : But (for the present) you shall only apply your selfe to this face of the elementarie courtier, a light, reuelling, and protesting face,

130 she made him. His discourse is like his behaiour, vncommon, but not vnpleasing ; hee is prodigall of neyther. Hee striues rather to bee that which men call iudicious, then to bee thought so : and is so truly learned, that he affects not to shew it. Hee will thinke, and speake his thought, both 135 freely : but as distant from deprauing another mans merit, as proclaiming his owne. For his valour, tis such, that he dares as little to offer an iniurie, as receiue one. In summe, he hath a most ingenuous and sweet spirit, a sharp and season'd wit, a straight iudgment, and a strong mind. Fortune could 140 neuer breake him, nor make him lesse. He counts it his pleasure, to despise pleasures, and is more delighted with good deeds, then goods. It is a competencie to him that

MER. Good LOVE, what reuerend gentlewoman in yeeres might this be? 10

CVF. This, Madam MORIA, guardian of the Nymphs. One that is not now to be perswaded of her wit, shee will thinke her selfe wise against all the iudgements that come. A lady made all of voice, and aire, talkes any thing of any thing. Shee is like one of your ignorant Poetasters of the 15 time, who when they haue got acquainted with a strange word, neuer rest till they haue wroong it in, though it loosen the whole fabricke of their sense.

MER. That was pretty and sharply noted, CVFID.

CVF. Shee will tell you, Philosophie was a fine reueller, 20 when shee was yong, and a gallant, and that then (though she say it) she was thought to be the Dame-DIDO, and HELLEN of the court: As also, what a sweet dogge shee had this time foure yeeres, and how it was call'd Fortune, and that (if the fates had not cut his thred) he had beene a 25 dogge to haue giuen entertainment to any gallant in this kingdome: and, vnlesse shee had whelpt it her selfe, shee could not haue lou'd a thing better i' this world.

MER. O, I pray thee no more, I am full of her.

CVF. Yes (I must needes tell you) shee composes a sack- 30 posset well; and would court a yong page sweetly, but that her breath is against it.

MER. Now, her breath (or something more strong) protect mee from her: th'other, th'other, CVFID.

CVF. O, that's my lady and mistris, Madam PHI- 35 LAVTIA. Shee admires not her selfe for any one particularity, but for all: shee is faire, and shee knowes it: shee has a pretty light wit too, and shee knowes it: shee can dance, and shee knowes that too: play at shittle-cock, and that too: no quality shee has, but shee shall take a very 40

PHI. Faith, how lik'd you my quippe to HEDON, about the garter? was't not witty?

50 MOR. Exceeding witty and integrate: you did so aggrauate the iest withall.

PHI. And did I not dance mouingly the last night?

MOR. Mouingly? out of measure (in troth) sweet charge.

MER. A happy commendation, to dance out of measure.

PHA. Yes faith, th'other was so neere the common: it had no extraordinary grace; besides, I had worne it almost a day, in good troth.

MER. Her very name speakes her, let her passe. But are these (CVPID) the starres of CYNTHIAS court? doe these Nymphs attend vpon DIANA?

105 CVP. They are in her court (MERCVRIE) but not as starres, these neuer come in the presence of CYNTHIA. The Nymphs that make her traine, are the diuine ARETE, TIME, PHRONESIS, THAVMA, and others of that high sort. These are priuately brought in by MORIA in

M E R. Thou hast well intituled him, C o s, for hee will discouer all hee knowes.

G E L. I, and a little more too, when the spirit is vpon him. 15

P R O. O, the good trauiailing gentleman yonder has caus'd such a drought i' the presence, with reporting the wonders of this new water ; that all the ladies, and gallants, lie languishing vpon the rushes, like so many pounded cattle
i' the midst of haruest, sighing one to another, and gasping, 20 as if each of them expected a cocke from the fountayne, to bee brought into his mouth : and (without we returne quickly) they are all (as a youth would say) no better then a few trowts cast a-shore, or a dish of eeles in a sand-bagge.

 What ! hath your taylor prouided the propertie (wee spake

Put case they doe retaine you there, as a fit property, to hire coaches some paire of months, or so ; or 55 to read them asleep in afternoones vpon some pretty pamphlet, to breathe you ; why, it shall in time imbolden you to some farther atchivement : In the interim, you may fashion your selfe to bee carelesse, and impudent.—

A s o. How if they would haue me to make verses ? I 60 heard Hedon spoke to for some.

A m o. Why, you must prooue the aptitude of your Genius ; if you find none, you must harken out a veine, and buy : prouided you pay for the silence, as for the worke. Then you may securely call it your owne. 65

A s o. Yes, and I'll giue out my acquaintance with all the best writers, to countenance me the more.

A m o. Rather seeme not to know 'hem, it is your best. I. Be wise, that you neuer so much as mention the name of one, nor remember it mention'd ; but if they be offered to 70 you in discourse, shake your light head, make betweene a sad and a smiling face, pittie some, raile at all, and commend your selfe : 't is your onely safe, and vnsuspected course.

Come, you shall looke back vpon the court againe to day,
 75 and be restor'd to your colours : I doe now partly aime at the cause of your repulse——(which was omenous indeed) for as you enter at the doore, there is oppos'd to you the frame of a wolfe in the hangings, which (surprizing your eye sodainely) gaue a false alarme to the heart ; and that 80 was it call'd your bloud out of your face, and so rowted the whole ranke of your spirits : I beseech you labour to forget it. And remember (as I inculcated to you before, for your comfort) HEDON, and ANAIDES.

C R I T E S.

D Oe, good detractiō, doe, and I the while Shall shake thy spight off with a carelesse smile.
Poore pittious gallants! What leane idle sleights
Their thoughts suggest to flatter their staru'd hopes?
As if I knew not how to entertaine 5
These straw-deuices: but, of force, must yeeld
To the weake stroke of their calumnious tongues.
What should I care what euery dor doth buzze
In credulous eares? it is a crowne to me,
That the best iudgements can report me wrong'd; 10
Them lyars; and their slanders impudent.
Perhaps (vpon the rumour of their speeches)
Some griued friend will whisper to me, C R I T E S, Men speake ill of thee; so they be ill men,
If they spake worse, 'twere better: for of such 15
To be disprais'd, is the most perfect praise.
What can his censure hurt me, whom the world
Hath censur'd vile before me? If good C H R E S T V S,

PHA. A bodie would thinke so, at these yeeres.

MOR. And I preferre another now, far before him, a 55 million at least.

MOR. Mary (faire Charge) ANAIDES.

PHA. ANAIDES! you talk't of a tune PHILAVTIA, there's one speakes in a key: like the opening of some 60 Iustices gate, or a poste-boies horne, as if his voice fear'd an arrest for some ill wordes it should giue, and were loth to come forth.

PHA. Nay, he has a worse fault then that, too.

PHI. A long heele? 70

PHA. That were a fault in a ladie, rather then him: No, they say, hee puts off the calues of his legs, with his stockings, euery night.

PHI. Out vpon him: turne to another of the pictures, for loues sake. What saies ARGVRION? whom doo's shee 75 commend, afore the rest?

PHA. Not, HEDON?

95 ARG. HEDON, in troth no. HEDON's a pretty slight courtier, and he weares his clothes well, and sometimes in fashion: Mary, his face is but indifferent, and he has no such excellent body. No, th'other is a most delicate youth, a sweet face, a streight body, a well proportion'd legge and what vpon the staires, what i' the garden, what i' the Nymphs chamber, what by barge, & what by coach. I would 145 tel you which courtier were scabbed, and which not ; which ladie had her owne face to lie with her a-nights, & which not ; who put off their teeth with their clothes in court, who their haire, who their complexion ; and in which boxe they put it. There should not a Nymph, or a widdow be got 150 with childe i' the verge, but I would guesse (within one or two,) who was the right father : and in what moneth it was gotten ; with what words ; and which way. I would tell you, which Madame lou'd a Monsieur, which a player,

 155 friend, who with her gentleman-vsher, who with her horse-keeper, who with her monkie, and who with all. Yes, and who jigg'd the cocke too.

P H A. Fye, you'd tell all, M O R I A. If I should wish now, it should bee to haue your tongue out. But what sayes 160 P H I L A V T I A ? who would she be ?

P H I. Troth, the verie same I am. Onely I would wish my selfe a little more command, and soueraignetie ; that all the court were subiect to my absolute becke, and all things in it depending on my looke ; as if there were no other 165 heauen, but in my smile, nor other hell, but in my frowne ; that I might send for any man I list, and haue his head cut off, when I haue done with him ; or made an eunuch, if he denyed mee : and if I saw a better face then mine owne , I might haue my doctor to poyson it. What would you wish, 170 P H A N T A S T E ?

P H A. Faith, I cannot (readily) tell you what : But (mee thinkes) I should wish my selfe all manner of creatures.
 Now, I would bee an empress ; and by and by a dutchesse ;
 then a great ladie of state ; then one of your miscelany 175 madams ; then a waiting-woman ; then your cittizens wife ;
 then a course countrey gentlewoman ; then a deyrrie maide ;
 then a shepherds lasse ; then an empress againe, or the queene of fayries : And thus I would prooue the vicissitudes, and whirle of pleasures, about, and againe. As I were a shepheardesse, I would bee pip'd and sung too ; as a deyrrie 180 wench, I would dance at may-poles, and make sillabubbes ;

 As a countrey gentlewoman, keep a good house, and come vp to terme, to see motions ; As a cittizens wife, bee troubled with a iealous husband, and put to my shifts ; (others miseries should bee my pleasures) As a waiting-woman, I 185 would taste my ladies delights to her ; As a miscellany madame inuent new tyres, and goe visite courtiers ; As a great ladie, lye a bed, and haue courtiers visite mee ; As a dutchesse, I would keepe my state : and as an empresse, I'd doe any thing. And, in all these shapes, I would euer 190 bee follow'd with th'affections of all that see mee. Mary,
 I my selfe would affect none ; or if I did, it should not bee heartily, but so as I might saue my selfe in 'hem still, and take pride in tormenting the poore wretches. Or, (now I thinke on't) I would, for one yeere, wish my selfe one 195 woman, but the richest, fairest, and delicatest in a kingdome, the very center of wealth, and beautie, wherein all lines of loue should meet ; and in that person I would prooue all manner of suters, of all humours, and of all complexions, and neuer haue any two of a sort : I would see how Loue 200 (by the power of his object) could worke inwardly alike, in a cholericke man, and a sanguine ; in a melancholique, and a phlegmatique ; in a foole, and a wise man ; in a clowne, and a courtier ; in a valiant man, and a coward : and how he could varie outward, by letting this gallant expresse 205 himselfe in dumbe gaze ; another with sighing, and rubbing his fingers ; a third, with play-ends, and pittifull verses ; a fourth, with stabbing himselfe, and drinking healths, or writing languishing letters in his bloud ; a fifth, in colour'd ribbands, and good clothes ; with this lord to smile, and 210 that lord to court, and the t'other lord to dote, and one HED. Faire Honor, Ambition dares not stoope; but if it be your sweet pleasure, I shall lose that title, I will (as 10 I am HEDON) apply my selfe to your bounties.

P^HI. That were the next way to distille my selfe of honor. O, no, rather be still ambitious, I pray you.

Act IIII. Scene III.

AMORPHVS, ASOTVS, HEDON, ANAIDES, MERCVRIE, CVPID, <MORVS,> PHANTASTE, PHILAVTIA, ARGVRION, MORIA.

THat was your fathers loue, the Nymph ARGVRION.
 I would haue you direct all your courtship thither, if you could but endeare your selfe to her affection, you were eternally en-gallanted.

5 ASO. In truth, sir? pray PHÆBUS I proue fauour-some in her faire eyes.

AMO. All diuine mixture, and increase of beautie to this bright beuy of ladies; and to the male-courtiers, complement, and courtesie.

10 HED. In the behalfe of the males, I gratifie you, AMORPHVS.

PHA. And I, of the females.

AMO. Succinctly return'd. I doe vale to both your thankes, and kisse them: but primarily to yours, most 15 ingenious, acute, and polite ladie.

PHI. Gods my life, how hee doe's all to bee qualifie her!
 ingenious, acute, and polite? as if there were not others in place as ingenious, acute, and polite, as shee.

HED. Yes, but you must know, ladie, hee cannot speake 20 out of a dictionary method.

PHA. Sit downe, sweet AMORPHVS: When will this water come, thinke you?

AMO. It cannot now be long, faire ladie.

ASO. How? most ambiguous beautie? loue you? that 25
I will by this hand-kercher.

MER. S'lid, he drawes his othes out of his pocket.

ARG. But, will you be constant?

ASO. Constant, Madam? I will not say for constantnesse, but by this purse (which I would be loth to sweare by, 30 vnlesse 'twere embroider'd) I protest (more then most faire ladie) you are the onely, absolute, and vnparelleld creature, I doe adore, and admire, and respect, and reuerence in this court, corner of the world, or kingdome: Mee thinkes you are melancholy. 35

ARG. Do's your heart speake all this?

ASO. Say you?—

MER. O, he is groping for another oth.

ASO. Now, by this watch (I marle how forward the day is) I doe vnfeignedly vow my selfe (s'light 'tis deeper then 40
I tooke it, past fue) yours entirely addicted, Madame.

ARG. I require no more, dearest ASOTVS, henceforth let mee call you mine, and in remembrance of me, vouchsafe to weare this chaine, and this diamond.

ASO. O god, sweet ladie! 45

CVP. There are new othes for him: what? doth HERMES taste no alteration, in all this?

MER. Yes, thou hast strooke ARGVRION inamour'd on ASOTVS, me thinkes.

CVP. Alas, no; I am no-body, I: I can doe nothing in 50
this disguise.

MER. But thou hast not wounded any of the rest, CVPID?

CVP. Not yet: it is enough that I haue begun so prosper-

Why, doe you not obserue how excellently the dittie is affected in euerie place? that I doe not marrie a word of short quantitie to a long note? nor an ascending sillable to a descending tone? Besides, vpon the 330 word (best) there, you see how I doe enter with an odde minnum, and driue it thorow the briefe, which no intelligent Musician (I know) but wil affirme to be verie rare, extraordinary, and pleasing.

MERCVRIE, CRITES.

IT is resolu'd on, CRITES, you must doe it.
 CRI. The grace diuineſt MERCVRIE hath done me,
 In this vouchsafde diſcouerie of himſelfe,
 Binds my obseruance in the vtmost terme
 Of ſatisfaction, to his godly will : 5
 Though I professe (without the affectation
 Of an enforc'd, and form'd austeritie)
 I could be willing to enioy no place
 With so vnequall natures. MER. We beleue it.
 But for our sake, and to inflict iust paines 10
 On their prodigious follies, aide vs now :
 No man is, presently, made bad, with ill.
 And good men, like the sea, should still maintaine
 Their noble taste, in midst of all fresh humours,
 That flow about them, to corrupt their streames, 15
 Bearing no season, much lesse salt of goodnesse.
 It is our purpose, CRITES, to correct,
 And punish, with our laughter, this nights sport
 Which our court-Dors so heartily intend :
 And by that worthy scorne, to make them know 20
 How farre beneath the dignitie of man
 Their serious, and most practis'd actions are.
 CRI. I, but though MERCVRIE can warrant out
 His vnder-takings, and make all things good,
 Out of the powers of his diuinitie, 25
 Th'offence will be return'd with weight on me,
 That am a creature so despise, and poore ;
 When the whole Court shall take it selfe abusde
 By our ironicall confederacie.
 MER. You are deceiu'd. The better race in court 30
 That haue the true nobilitie, call'd vertue,
 Will apprehend it, as a gratefull right most cleere, and cleane strokes. But then, you haue your passages, and imbroccata's in courtship ; as the bitter Bob in subtle, and secure offenders. I will example vnto you.

mouth on his back-side, you giue him the Reuerse stroke, 75 with this Sanna, or Storkes-bill, which makes vp your wits
Bob, most bitter.

A s o. Nay, for heauens sake, teach me no more. I know all as well—S'lid, if I did not, why was I nominated ? why did you chuse mee ? why did the ladies pricke out mee ?

me, at the bare Accost. Now, for the honor of my discipline.

H E D. Signior A M O R P H V S, reflect, reflect : what 105 meanes hee by that mouthed waue ?

C R I. He is in some distaste of your fellow disciple.

M E R. Signior, your scholer might haue plaid well still, if hee could haue kept his seate longer : I haue enough of him, now. He is a mere peece of glasse, I see through him, 110 by this time.

A M O. You come not to giue vs the scorne, Monsieur ?

M E R. Nor to be frighted with a face, Signior ! I haue seene the lyons. You must pardon me. I shall bee loth to hazzard a reputation with one, that ha's not a reputation 115 to lose.

A M O. How !

C R I. Meaning your pupil, sir.

A N A. This is that blacke deuill there.

A M O. You doe offer a strange affront, Monsieur.

C R I. Sir, he shall yeeld you all the honor of a competent 120 aduersarie, if you please to vnder-take him——

M E R. I am prest for the encounter.

A M O. Me? challenge me?

A s o. What! my Master, sir? S'light, Monsieur, meddle with me, doe you heare? but doe not meddle with 125 my Master.

M E R. Peace, good squib, goe out.

C R I. And stinke, he bids you.

A s o. Master?

A M O. Silence, I doe accept him. Sit you downe, and 130 obserue. Me? He neuer profest a thing at more charges.
Prepare your selfe, sir. Challenge me? I will prosecute what disgrace my hatred can dictate to me.

C R I. How tender a trauailers spleene is? comparison, to men, that deserue least, is euer most offensiue. 135

A M O. You are instructed in our chartell, and know our weapons?

M E R. I appeare not without their notice, sir.

A s o. But must I lose the prizes, Master?

A M O. I will win them for you, bee patient. Lady, 140 vouchsafe the tenure of this ensigne. Who shall be your stickler?

M E R. Behold him.

A M O. I would not wish you a weaker. Sound musiques. 144
I prouoke you, at the bare Accost.

A charge.

P H A. Excellent comely!

C R I. And worthily studied. This is th' exalted Fore-top.

H E D. O, his legge was too much produc'd.

A N A. And his hat was carried skiruilly.

P H I. Peace; Let's see the Monsieur's Accost: Rare! 150

P H A. Sprightly, and short.

A N A. True, it is the french curteau: He lacks but to 156

H E D. He do's hop. He do's bound too much.

A M O. The second bout, to conclude this weapon.

P H A. Good, beleue it !

P H I. An excellent offer !

C R I. This is call'd the solemne band-string.

H E D. Foe, that cringe was not put home.

160 A N A. S'foot, he makes a face like a stab'd L V C R E C E.

A S O. Well, he would needes take it vpon him, but would I had done it for all this. He makes me sit still here, like a babion as I am.

C R I. Making villanous faces.

165 P H I. See, the French prepares it richly.

C R I. I, this is y'cleped the *serious trif*le.

A M O. Iudges, award the prize. Take breath, sir. This 171 bout hath beene laborious.

A S O. And yet your Criticke, or your Besso'gno, will thinke these things fopperie, and easie, now.

C R I. Or rather meere lunacy. For, would any reason-175 able creature make these his serious studies, and perfections? Much lesse, onely liue to these ends ? to be the false pleasure of a few, the true loue of none, and the iust laughter of all ?

H E D. We must preferre the Monsieur, we courtiers must be partiall.

180 A N A. Speake, Guardian. Name the prize, at the bare Accost.

M O R. A paire of wall-eyes, in a face forced.

A N A. Giue the Monsieur. A M O R P H V S hath lost his eies.

M E R. Remercie, Madame, and these honourable Censors.

A M O. Well, to the second weapon, The better Reguard : I will encounter you better. Attempt. 195

H E D. Sweet Honour.

P H I. What sayes my good Ambition ?

H E D. Which take you at this next weapon ? I lay a discretion, with you, on A M O R P H V S head.

P H I. Why, I take the french-behau'd gentleman. 200

H E D. 'Tis done, a discretion.

C R I. A discretion ? A prettie court-wager ! would any discreet person hazard his wit, so ?

P H A. I'll lay a discretion, with you, A N A I D E S.

A N A. Hang 'hem. I'll not venter a doibt of discretion, 205 on eyther of their heads.—

C R I. No, he should venter all then.

A N A. I like none of their playes.

H E D. See, see, this is strange play ! A charge.

A N A. 'Tis too full of vncertaine motion. He hobbles 210 too much.

C R I. 'Tis call'd your court-staggers, sir.

H E D. That same fellow talkes so, now he has a place.

A N A. Hang him, neglect him.

M E R. Your good ladships affectioned. 215

A S O. They must doe so, sister, how should it bee the better Reguard, else ?

P H A. Me thinkes, hee did not this respectiuely inough.

C R I. Indeed he displayes his feet, rarely.

H E D. See, see ; Hee do's the respectiue Leere damnably

A M O. *The true idolater of your beauties, shall neuer passe

A N A. Good play ; but 't is too rough, and boisterous.

A M O. I will second it with a stroke easier, wherein I 240 will prooue his language.

expires, and without continuall riot in reparation is lost:
which who so striues to keep, it is one speciall argument to me, that (affecting to smell better then other men) he doth indeed smell farre worse. 340

M E R. I know, you will say it sits well, sir.

onely the iudgment to heat your pressing toole. But for a court-Mistris, that studies these decorums, and knowes 350 the proportion of euerie cut, to a haire, knowes why such a colour, is cut vpon such a colour, and, when a satten is cut vpon six taffataes, wil looke that we should diue into the

A N A. With me ? 550

C R I. Yes, sir.

A N A. Heart, I shall neuer haue such a fortune to saue my selfe in a fellow againe, and your two reputations, gentlemen, as in this. I'll vndertake him.

H E D. Doe, and swinge him soundly, good A N A I D E S. 555

A N A. Let mee alone, I'll play other manner of play,

M E R. It shall if you will, I forgiue my right.

A N A. Are you so confident ? what's your weapon ?

C R I. At any, I, sir. 560

M E R. The perfect Close, That's now the best.

A N A. Content, I'll pay your scholaritie. Who offers ?

C R I. Mary, that will I. I dare giue you that aduantage, too.

A N A. You dare ? Well, looke to your liberall skonce. 565

A M O. Make your play still, vpon the answere, sir.

A N A. Hold your peace, you are a hobby-horse.

M E R. Now C R I T E S, strike home.

570 C R I. You shall see me vndoe the assur'd swaggerer with a tricke, instantly : I will play all his owne play before him ;
court the wench, in his garbe, in his phrase, with his face ;
leauē him not so much as a looke, an eye, a stalke, or an imperfect oth, to expresse himselfe by, after me.

575 M E R. Excellent, C R I T E S.

A charge. A N A. When begin you, sir ? Haue you consulted ?

C R I. To your cost, sir ; which is the Peece, stands forth to bee courted ? O, are you shee ? Well, Madame, or sweet lady, it is so, I doe loue you in some sort, doe you 580 conceiue ? and though I am no Monsieur, nor no Signior, and do want (as they say) logicke and sophistrie, and good words, to tell you why it is so ; yet by this hand, and by that candle, it is so ; And though I bee no booke-worme, nor one that deales by arte, to giue you rhetorike, and causes, why it 585 should be so, or make it good it is so, yet dam' me, but I know it is so, and am assur'd it is so, and I and my sword shall make it appeare it is so ; and giue you reason sufficient, how it can be no otherwise, but so——

H E D. S'light, A N A I D E S, you are mockt ; and so we 590 are all.

M E R. How now, Signior ! What, suffer your selfe to bee cossen'd of your courtship, before your face ?

H E D. This is plaine confederacy, to disgrace vs : Let's bee gone, and plot some reuenge.

595 A M O. *When men disgraces share,
The lesser is the care.*

C R I. Nay stay, my deare Ambition, I can doe you ouer too. You that tell your Mistris, Her beautie is all composde of theft ; Her haire stole from A P O L L O ' s goldy-locks ;
600 Her white and red, lillies, and roses stolne out of paradise ;
Her eyes, two starres, pluckt from the skie ; Her nose, the gnomon of Loues diall, that tells you how the clocke of your heart goes : And for her other parts, as you cannot reckon 'hem, they are so many ; so you cannot recount them, they are so manifest. Yours, if his owne, vnfortunate H O Y D E N, 605 in stead of H E D O N.

A s o. Sister, come away, I cannot endure 'hem longer.

A flourish.

M E R. Goe, Dors, and you, my Madame Courting-stocks, Follow your scorned, and derided mates ;
Tell to your guiltie brests, what meere guilt blocks 610
You are, and how vnworthy humane states.

C R I. Now, sacred god of wit, if you can make Those, whom our sports taxe in these apish graces,
Kisse (like the fighting snakes) your peacefull rod ;
These times shall canonize you for a god. 615

M E R. Why, C R I T E S, thinke you any noble spirit,
Or any, worth the title of a man,
Will be incenst, to see th'inchaunted vailes
Of selfe-conceit, and seruile flatterie
(Wrapt in so many folds, by time, and custome) 620
Drawne from his wronged, and bewitched eyes ?
Who sees not now their shape, and nakednesse,
Is blinder then the sonne of earth, the mole :
Crown'd with no more humanitie, nor soule.

C R I. Though they may see it, yet the huge estate 625
Phansie, and forme, and sensuall pride haue gotten,
Will make them blush for anger, not for shame ;
And turne shewne nakednesse, to impudence.
Humour is now the test, we trie things in ;
All power is iust : Nought that delights is sinne. 630
And, yet the zeale of euey knowing man, (Opprest with hills of tyrannie, cast on vertue
By the light phant'sies of fooles, thus transported) Cannot but vent the Ætna of his fires,
T'enflame best bosomes, with much worthier loue 635
Then of these outward, and effeminate shades :
That, these vaine ioyes, in which their wills consume
Such powers of wit, and soule, as are of force

 And, for the practice of a forced looke,
 An antique gesture, or a fustian phrase,
 Studie the natiue frame of a true heart,
 An inward comelinesse of bountie, knowledge,
 645 And spirit, that may conforme them, actually,
 To Gods high figures, which they haue in power :
 Which to neglect for a selfe-louing neatnesse,
 Is sacrilege, of an vnardon'd greatnesse.
- M E R. Then let the truth of these things strengthen thee, 650 In thy exempt, and only man-like course :
 Like it the more, the lesse it is respected ;
 Though men faile, vertue is by gods protected.

All out of tune : because (indeede) we see
There is not that analogie, twixt discords,
As betweene things but meerey opposite.

A R E. There is your error. For as H E R M E S wand 15
Charmes the disorders of tumultuous ghosts,
And as the strife of Chaos then did cease,
When better light then Natures did arriue :
So, what could neuer in it selfe agree,

And at her sight, turnes forth-with regular,
Whose scepter guides the flowing Ocean.
And though it did not, yet the most of them

The fourth in white, is APHELEIA, a Nymph as pure and simple as the soule, or as an abrase table, and is therefore called Simplicitie; without folds, without pleights, without colour, without counterfeit: and (to speake plainly) Plainnesse it selfe. Her deuce is no deuce. The 55 word vnder her siluer Shield, OMNIS ABEST FVCVS. Alluding to thy spotlesse selfe, who art as farre from impuritie, as from mortalitie.

My selfe (celestiall Goddesse) more fit for the court of CYNTHIA, then the arbors of CYTHEREE, am call'd 60 ANTEROS, or Louesemie; the more welcome therefore to thy court, and the fitter to conduct this quaternion, who as they are thy professed votaries, and for that cause aduersaries to Loue, yet thee (perpetuall Virgin) they both loue, and vow to loue eternally.

- For so ACTÆON, by presuming farre,
 15 Did (to our grieve) incurre a fatall doome ;
 And so, swolne NIOBE (comparing more

 But are we therefore judged too extreme ?
 Seemes it no crime, to enter sacred bowers,

 Most lewdly to pollute ? Seemes it no crime,
 To braue a deitie ? Let mortals learne
 To make religion of offending heauen ;

POETASTER

THE TEXT

Poetaster was entered on the Stationers' Register by its first publisher, Matthew Lowne, on December 21, 1601. The entry is as follows :

21 decembris

Arber, Transcript, III. 198.

The play was published next year with Lowne's imprint. The collation, A to M in fours with one leaf of N, is in detail—Title-page, A 1. The Persons that Act, A 1 verso. Livor (or the speech of Envy), A 2. Prologue, A 3. The text of the play, A 3 verso to N recto. A note 'To the Reader', explaining that 'an Apology from the Author', designed 'in place of the Epilogue', could not be printed, N verso.

Four copies have been collated for this edition—those in the British Museum, the Bodleian, the Dyce Library, and Mr. T. J. Wise's copy. The text as a whole is carefully printed and only two variations have been detected in it : in II. i. 36, Mr. Wise's copy has the misprint 'rarher', which is corrected in the other copies ; in III. i. 4 the British Museum copy 'corrects' the spelling 'Mecænas' to 'Mecænas', to tally with the spelling in Horace's opening speech. Both of these alterations seem to have been made by the printer.¹

Occasionally the Quarto fails to reproduce the catchwords, but these errors do not seriously affect the text. At I. ii. 12-13 B drops a syllable : A 4 verso ends 'By my hous- | holde' ; B begins 'gods'. At III. iv. 140 F has had a line taken over and the old catchword retained : F ends

I am none of your fellowes ; I haue com-
I Pyr.

¹ 'Mecænas' is the common spelling of the name both in Quarto and Folio. Jonson must have accepted it, so that we are not warranted in substituting the classical form 'Mæcenas'. 'Mecænas' is found in the Quarto in the list of the characters and in the text at I. ii. 164 and, originally, in the passage noted above: in both Quarto and Folio at IV. iv. 41. In Elizabethan times 'Mecænas', 'Mecœnas', and 'Mecenas' would be pronounced alike.

F verso begins

maunded a hundred and fiftie such Rogues, I.
 1 Pyr. I, and most of that hundred and fiftie . . .

A full page of text has normally thirty-five lines in the Quarto; there are thirty-five on E 4 verso. F, F verso, F 2, and F 2 verso have thirty-four. There may have been a slight shortening of the text at this point, deleting some personality after it had been set up. Jonson had difficulties with the authorities over this play, and public opinion censured him for satirizing lawyers, captains, and players.¹

The play was next printed in the Folio of 1616. By a printer's error the second page of the text, p. 276, part of Envy's speech, is head'ed 'Cynthias Reuells'. The title-page is in two states—one plain, with the imprint 'London, Printed by William Stansby, for Matthew Lownes'; the other framed in an ornamental border, 'Printed by W. Stansby, for M. Lownes.' As might be expected, the text was set up from a copy of the Quarto which Jonson had revised. Peculiarities of the printing prove this.

For instance, the Folio copies the devices of spacing and paragraphing used in the Quarto to indicate a dramatic pause. In i. ii. 211-12 the Quarto prints

Thou shalt be my Solicitor : Tis right olde boy, Ist ?

In ii. i. 166-7

. . . till I turne my selfe to nothing but obseruation.
 Godmorrow cosen Cytheris.

In iii. i. 16-17, Horace's first reply to Crispinus in Holy Street :

Not greatly gallant, Sir : like my fortunes; well.
 I'm bold to take my leaue Sir, . . .

¹ Trivial variations of the catchwords are E 4 (iii. iv. 67) c.w. 'must'—text, 'must'; G 4 verso (iv. iv. 23), c.w. 'him';—text, 'him'; I 2 verso (iv. viii. 19) c.w. 'Me'—text, 'Mee'; M 2 (v. iii. 422) c.w. 'Deme.'—text, 'Demet.'; M 4 (ibid., 566) c.w. 'Crisp.'—text, 'Crispinus.'.

In iv. iv. 23-7.

I can talke to no Pothecaries, now. Heart of mee ! Stay the Pothecary there.

You shall see, I haue fish't out a cunning piece of Plot now ;

In these four examples the breaks in the text and the paragraphing are clear : Ovid senior is telling out money to Tucca in the first passage ; Cytheris enters at the second ; in the third Horace stops short, stares pointedly at Crispinus, and then haughtily turns away ; in the fourth there is a short pause before ' Heart of mee ! ' while the fussy magistrate hits on a new idea, and a longer pause at the end of the line while the Lictor goes out and returns with Minos. The Folio reproduces all these minor stage-effects ; once, indeed, in II. ii (157-8), it is misled by the Quarto into copying a pointless punctuation of this kind :

One of your own compositions, Hermogenes.
He offers you vantage enough.

In three passages the Folio marks a paragraph not indicated in the Quarto because the words are normally spaced to make a full line in the text. Only the first of these has any significance :

Crisp. And how deales Mecænas with thee? Liberally? Ha?
Is he open handed? bountifull?

(III. i. 230-2 : Sig. E verso.)

The Folio prints these as two lines, as if Crispinus, whose only object in clinging to Horace and refusing to be shaken off was to get an introduction to Mæcnas, stops short to measure the effect of his words and, getting no reply, drives the point home by repetition.

But the other two examples have no point : it is impossible to credit the muddle-headed and excitable Lupus with a vestige of subtlety. They relate to Horace's emblem of the vulture and the wolf preying upon the dead ass :

Lupus. An Embleme? right : That's Greeke for a Libell.
Doe but marke, how Confident he is. (v. iii. 59-60 : Sig. L.)

Lupus. An Asse? Good still: That's I, too. I am the Asse.
You meane me by the Asse. (Ibid. 96-7: Sig. L verso.)

Here the printer seems to have misjudged. He certainly did later in printing a prose speech of Tucca's as three lines of verse:

Tucca. Thou twangst right, little Horace; they be indeed:

A couple of Chap-falne Curres. Come, Wee of the Bench,
Let's rise to the Vrne, and condemne 'hem, quickly.

(Ibid. 340-2: Sig. M)

This outburst comes between a verse speech of Horace and Virgil's dignified summing-up. All that could be said in defence of the metrical form here is that, if Tucca had tried to compose verses, it is probably the sort of verse he would have composed. But it is clearly prose, and follows the Quarto lining mechanically; it is strange that Jonson overlooked the error in his proof-reading.

A few minor examples of mispunctuation are taken over from the Quarto: 'he' shall haue them now' (III. iv. 86), which is probably a misprint for 'a' shall'; 'get' (ibid. 133); 'Dost thou 'swear?' (ibid. 151), where the mark of a lead was misread as an apostrophe; and 'the ditt'is all borrowed' (iv. iii. 95).

In revising the punctuation of the Folio, Jonson freely introduced the dash, the exclamation mark, and the hyphen, and he is more careful in the use of the bracket. An example of his minute care is to be found before Tucca's admiring phrases interjected in the parody of Marston's style in v. iii. 275 ff. They were inset in brackets in the Quarto: the Folio at first inset them again, prefixing a long dash. Then, as an afterthought, Jonson cancelled the dash and printed the lines to range with the names of the other speakers. He also substituted a comma for the heavier stop in 'Come: 'True; 'O, Father; 'Aye me; and similar openings of a speech. A comparison of the following passages will show how he went to work.

Quarto.

Crisp. Sweete Horace!
Minerua, and the Muses,

seignes. How far'st thou

Folio.

CRIS. Sweet HORACE,
MINERVA, and the Muses stand auspicious to thy desseignes. How far'st thou, sweete man? frolicke?

HORA. Not greatly gallant, sir, like my fortunes; well.
I'm bold to take my leaue, sir, you'd naught else, sir, would you? III. i. 13-18.

What sight is this? MECÆ-NAS! HORACE! Say!
Haue we our senses? . . . Are they the Gods?
Reuerence, amaze, and furie fight in me. IV. vi. 1-6.

The dramatic pointing of the Quarto text—especially in the significant pauses 'Reuerence: Amaze:' with which the speaker tries to stifle his anger in the second passage—gives way to Jonson's systematic attempt to mark precisely the structure of the sentence. This appears even more noticeably in his alteration of the Quarto's reproduction of Tucca's stammer, which Jonson finally left to the actor, relying rather on the comma to indicate a succession of gasps than on heavier stops to mark strong pauses.

Verse is printed as prose in both Quarto and Folio at III. i. 83-4, iv. 256-8, iv. vii. 30-1; and prose is turned into verse at v. iii. 340-2.

Finally, a strange misprint of the Quarto, the repeated 'and' in iv. vii. 6 'Hart; and and all the Poetry in Parnassus get me to be a Player againe' reappears uncorrected in the Folio.

But these lapses are only occasional. The Folio shows that Jonson worked carefully over the earlier text, correcting punctuation, toning down some dangerous allusions, and strengthening weak phrases. In this last point his retouchings recall the treatment of Every Man out of his Humour: the literary critic asserts himself.

The Folio also makes some important additions to the text. Far the most valuable of these is the 'Apologetical Dialogue', which was 'only once spoken vpon the stage' and suppressed by authority: Jonson retrieved it in 1616. Without it we should have a serious gap in our knowledge of the history of the play.¹ It is significant that two insertions of the Folio strengthen the satire on lawyers and players, two classes who protested strongly against the treatment of their order in the original text. Some scathing comments on lawyers were printed for the first time in Act I, Scene ii, ll. 98-136: they added point and sting to the Quarto text. 'Why, the law makes a man happy, without respecting any other merit: a simple scholer, or none at all may be a lawyer.' Considering Jonson's standard of scholarship, that meant a good deal; but he continues, 'If thou canst but haue the patience to plod inough, talke, and make noise inough, be impudent inough, and tis inough.' 'Three bookes will furnish you.' 'And the lesse arte, the better.' And there is a final fling at the lawyer's elastic conscience, which he can stretch to any length. It is probable that this passage, like the 'Apologetical Dialogue', gave trouble—as well it might,—was judiciously cancelled in the Quarto, and revived in the Folio. Once, and once only, a term of contempt was toned down: Jonson originally talked of 'their () Courts', a euphemistic way of printing 'their damned Courts'; he modified this to 'their loud courts' (III. i. 216).

A general indictment of the players, accusing them of fleecing and pandaring (III. iv. 306-13), is added to a personal attack on individual actors: this too was probably a revival of a suppressed passage and not an afterthought.

On the other hand, the new scene added in the Folio to round off the third act, a dialogue between Horace and Trebatius, which is a free rendering of the first Satire of Horace's second book, was new in 1616. The part of Trebatius was not in the Quarto. Horace in this poem describes his mission as a satirist. In the words of Professor Arthur Palmer, 'This Satire forms a sort of general apologetic preface to the second book, and, though prefixed to that collection, was, perhaps, the last composed. Horace found that his Satire had made him unpopular.¹ . . . He had probably been advised to abandon it, and to take to some other branch of poetry; and this poem may be regarded as an answer to those who advised him to do so. Keeping to the dramatic form, which he has cultivated all through the second book, he represents himself as consulting the famous jurist C. Trebatius Testa.' Trebatius had been a friend of Cicero, who introduced him to Julius Caesar as the first lawyer of his day.² Now Jonson's main plea in the 'Apologetical Dialogue' was that, after being attacked for three years by the players, he unwillingly replied to them by drawing upon ancient history and pointing a moral from the times of Augustus Caesar,

When wit, and artes were at their height in Rome, and master-spirits, such as Vergil and Horace did not want

Detractors, then, or practisers against them.

To introduce a great Roman lawyer, who was broad-minded enough to be on friendly terms with a Roman satirist, appealed to Jonson. It ought to silence legal carpers in London. Further, he felt that the parallel between Horace's position and his own was complete. The critical bent which gave a new turn to historical reading is characteristic of Jonson. In later life he resorted in a similar spirit to Seneca for quotations to illustrate the oratory of Bacon, the copiousness of Shakespeare, and even his own retentive memory and ruthless power of concentration.¹

The text of Poetaster in the 1640 Folio was printed by Robert Young. Matthew Lowndes died in 1625, and his son Thomas succeeded to the business; on May 30, 1627, he assigned his rights in Poetaster to his uncle, Humphrey Lownes, and to Robert Young (Arber, iv. 205). On November 6, 1628, Humphrey Lownes assigned his rights to George Cole and George Latham, the latter a son-in-law of Matthew Lownes (ibid. iv. 205); on December 6, 1630, they reassigned them to Robert Young, who thus acquired the full copyright (ibid. 245). But Richard Bishop's device (no. 393 in McKerrow) of a boy with wings on his right arm which points upward to a figure in the clouds, but held down to earth by a heavy weight which he carries in his left hand, appears above the imprint. Bishop had taken over Stansby's rights to the works in the 1616 Folio on March 4, 1639, and all the plays except Poetaster and the masques in this volume have his imprint.

The Folio of 1640 is in the main a reprint of the 1616 Folio, but it differs in three passages, and sometimes it corrects the punctuation in accordance with Jonson's principles. The readings are 'enforce' for 'enforme' in Envy's opening speech (Ind. 54); 'savours' for 'labours' in the tribute to Virgil:

His learning labours not the schoole-like glosse,
That most consists in ecchoing wordes, and termes
(v. i. 129-30)

and a smoother reading in the advise to Crispinus

Looke, you take
Each morning, of old CATOES principles
A good draught, next your heart; that walk vpon, Till it be well digested. (v. iii. 536-9)

which appears in the form

Look, you take . . .
A good draught, next your heart; and walk upon't . . .

The two first are weaker readings ; the third might be an editor's correction. It would be hazardous to affirm that these readings are posthumously printed corrections made by Jonson himself.

The Folio text has been twice reprinted. Dr. Herbert S. Mallory edited it in 1905 for the Yale Studies in English, no. xxvii, from the copy in the Library of Yale University. It is an extremely accurate text, a collation of it with the original revealing not a single error. A careful and scholarly edition by Dr. Josiah H. Penniman appeared in 1913 in Heath's Belles-Lettres Series. It was printed from the editor's own copy of the Folio, collated with the copy in the University of Pennsylvania Library and the Grenville copy in the British Museum. The old spelling and punctuation are retained, but italics and capital letters are modernized. The chief variants of the Quarto and the 1640 Folio are noted in the critical apparatus.

That our sunke eyes haue wak't for, all this while :
Here will be subiect for my snakes, and me. 5

Cling to my necke, and wrists, my louing wormes,
And cast you round, in soft, and amorous foulds,
Till I doe bid, vncurle : Then, breake your knots,
Shoot out your selues at length, as your forc't stings
Would hide themselues within his malic't sides, 10

To whom I shall apply you. Stay! the shine
Of this assembly here offends my sight,
I'll darken that first, and out-face their grace.

Wonder not, if I stare : these fiteene weekes
(So long as since the plot was but an embrion) 15

Haue I, with burning lights, mixt vigilant thoughts,
In expectation of this hated play :

To which (at last) I am arriu'd as Prologue.

 How might I force this to the present state ?

OVID. Be not, good ignorance: I'm glad th'art gone: 40 For thus alone, our eare shall better judge The hastie errors of our morning muse.

ENuie, why twitst thou me, my time's spent ill?

And call'st my verse, fruits of an idle quill?

Or that (vnlike the line from whence I sprung)

Wars dustie honours I pursue not young?

Or that I studie not the tedious lawes;

And prostitute my voyce in euerie cause?

Which through the world shall euer chaunt my name.

(A poxe on 'hem, what doe they here?) And yet when they come, speake them as faire, and giue them the kindest welcome in wordes, that can be.

CHLO. Is that the fashion of courtiers, CRISPINS?

CRIS. I assure you, it is, ladie, I haue obseru'd it. 150 me! O I O V E, what a setting forth it is to a man, to haue many courtiers come to his house! Sweetly was it said of a good olde house-keeper; I had rather want meate, then want ghests: specially, if they be courtly ghests. For, neuer trust me, if one of their good legges made in a house, be not 210 worth all the good cheere, a man can make them. A cunning woman, one SABELLA sung,

HORA. Shee told me, I should surely neuer perish
By famine, poyson, or the enemies sword ;

Should neuer hurt me ; nor the tardie gowt :
200 But in my time, I should be once surpriz'd,
By a strong tedious talker, that should vexe
And almost bring me to consumption.
Therefore (if I were wise) she warn'd me shunne
All such long-winded monsters, as my bane :
205 For if I could but scape that one discourser,
I might (no doubt) proue an olde aged man.

That place is not in Rome, I dare affirme,

255 More pure, or free, from such low common euils.

There's no man greeu'd, that this is thought more rich,

MINOS, LICTORS, CRISPINVS, HORACE.

THat's he, in the imbrodered hat, there, with the ashcolour'd feather : his name is LABERIVS CRIS-PINVS.

LICT. LABERIVS CRISPINVS ; I arrest you in 5 the Emperours name.

CRIS. Me, sir ? doe you arrest me ?

LICT. I, sir, at the sute of Master MINOS the pothe-carie.

HORA. Thankes, great APOLLO : I will not slip thy 10 fauour offered me in my escape, for my fortunes.

 Where's HORACE ? HORACE ? HORACE ?

MINO. Sir, doe not you know me ?

CRIS. O yes ; I know you, master MINOS : 'crie you

C H L O. That's sure, sir: let me craue your name, I pray 45 you, sir.

T v c c. I am know'n by the name of Captaine T v c c A, punke; the noble Roman, punke: a gent'man, and a commander, punke.

C H L O. In good time: a gentleman, and a commander? 50 that's as good as a poet, me thinkes.

C R I S. A prettie instrument! It's my cousin C Y T H E R I S violl, this: is't not?

C Y T H. Nay, play cousin, it wants but such a voice, and hand, to grace it, as yours is. 55

C R I S. Alas, cousin, you are merrily inspir'd.

C Y T H. 'Pray you play, if you loue me.

C R I S. Yes, cousin: you know, I doe not hate you.

T I B V. A most subtill wench! How she hath baited him with a violl yonder, for a song! 60

C R I S. Cousin, 'pray you call mistris C H L O E; shee shall heare an essay of my poetrie.

T v c c. I'll call her. Come hither, cockatrice: here's SONG.

Loue is blinde, and a wanton ;
In the whole world, there is scant-one such another :

- 70 No, not his Mother.
He hath pluckt her doues, and sparrowes,
To feather his sharpe arrowes,
And alone preuaileth,
Whilst sicke VENVVS waileth.
75 But if CYPRIS once recouer
The wag ; it shall behoue her
To looke better to him :
Or shee will vndoe him.

ALBI. O, most odoriferous musicke !

- 80 TVCC. A, ha ! stinkard. Another ORPHEVS, you slaue, another ORPHEVS ! an ARION, riding on the backe of a dolphin, rascall !

GALL. Haue you a copy of this dittie, sir ?

CRIS. Master ALBIVS ha's.

- 85 ALBI. I, but in truth, they are my wiues verses ; I must not shew 'hem.

TVCC. Shew 'hem, bankrupt, shew 'hem ; they haue salt in 'hem, and will brooke the aire, stinkard.

GALL. How ? to his bright mistris, CANIDIA ?

- 90 CRIS. I, sir, that's but a borrowed name ; as OVIDS CORINNA, or PROPERTIVS his CYNTHIA, or your NEMESIS, or DELIA, TIBVLLVS.

GALL. It's the name of HORACE his witch, as a remember.

POETASTERS? I know you to be men of worship—
He shall write with HORACE, for a talent: and let 100
MECÆNAS, and his whole colledge of criticks take his

PHAETON; thou shalt.

DEME. Alas, sir, HORACE! hee is a meere sponge; nothing but humours, and obseruation; he goes vp and 105 downe sucking from euery societie, and when hee comes home, squeezes himselfe drie againe. I know him, I.

TVC C. Thou saiest true, my poore poeticall Furie, hee

vpon paper, against a man, liues eternally to vpbraid him in the mouth of euery slaue tankerd-bearer, or water-man; not a bawd, or a boy that comes from the bake-house, but shall point at him: 'tis all dogge, and scorpion; he carries 115 poison in his teeth, and a sting in his taile. Fough, body of

OVID. I: This hath wak't vs. MERCURY, our 200 the great Emperour, AVGVSTVS CAESAR: And command him, from vs (of whose bountie he hath receiued his sir-name, AVGVSTVS) that for a thanke-offring to our beneficence, he presently sacrifice as a dish to this banquet, 205 his beautifull and wanton daughter IVLIA. Shee's a curst queane, tell him ; and plaies the scold behind his backe: Therefore, let her be sacrific'd. Command him this, MERCURY, in our high name of IVPITER

ALTITONANS. 210

IULI. Stay, feather-footed MERCURY, and tell AVGVSTVS, from vs, the great IVNO SATVRNIA ;
if he thinke it hard to doe, as IVPITER hath commanded him, and sacrifice his daughter, that hee had better to doe so ten times, then suffer her to loue the well-nos'd poet, 215 OVID: whom he shall doe well to whip, or cause to bee whipt, about the capitoll, for soothing her, in her follies.

OVID.

B Anisht the court? Let me be banisht life;
 Since the chiefe end of life is there concluded:
 Within the court, is all the kingdome bounded,
 And as her sacred spheare doth comprehend
 Ten thousand times so much, as so much place 5
 In any part of all the empire else;
 So euery body, moouing in her spheare,
 Containes ten thousand times as much in him,
 As any other, her choice orbe excludeth.
 As in a circle, a magician, then 10
 Is safe, against the spirit, he excites;
 But out of it, is subiect to his rage,
 And loseth all the vertue of his arte:
 So I, exil'd the circle of the court,
 Lose all the good gifts, that in it I ioy'd. 15
 "No vertue currant is, but with her stamp:
 "And no vice vicious, blaunch't with her white hand.
 The court's the abstract of all Romes desert;
 And my deare I V L I A, th'abstract of the court.
 Mee thinkes, now I come neere her, I respire 20
 Some aire of that late comfort, I receiu'd:
 And while the euening, with her modest vaile,
 Giues leaue to such poore shaddowes as my selfe,
 To steale abroad, I, like a heart-lesse ghost,
 Without the liuing body of my loue, 25
 Will here walke, and attend her. For I know,
 Not farre from hence, shee is imprisoned,
 And hopes, of her strict guardian, to bribe
 So much admittance, as to speake to me,
 And cheere my fainting spirits, with her breath. 30

I V L I A, O V I D.

- O V I D ? my loue ? O V I D. Here, heavenly I V L I A.
I V L I. Here ? and not here ? O, how that word doth play
With both our fortunes, differing, like our selues,
Both one ; and yet diuided, as oppos'd ?
5 I high, thou low ? ô, this our plight of place
Doubly presents the two lets of our loue,
Locall, and ceremoniall height, and lownesse :
Both waies, I am too high, and thou too low.
Our mindes are euen, yet : ô, why should our bodies,
10 That are their slaues, be so without their rule ?
I'le cast my selfe downe to thee ; If I die,
I'le euer liue with thee : no height of birth,
Of place, of dutie, or of cruell power,
Shall keepe mee from thee ; should my father locke 15 This body vp within a tombe of brasse,
Yet I'le be with thee. If the formes, I hold
Now in my soule, be made one substance with it ;
That soule immortall ; and the same 'tis now ;
Death cannot raze th'affects, shee now retayneth :
20 And then, may shee be any where shee will.
The soules of parents rule not childrens soules,
When death sets both in their dissolu'd estates ;
Then is no child, nor father : then eternitie
Frees all, from any temporall respect.
25 I come, my O V I D, take me in thine armes :
And let me breathe my soule into thy brest.
O V I D. O, stay, my loue : the hopes thou do'st conceiue

So thou might'st ioy thy loue, in th'other life. 30
 But know (my princely loue) when thou art dead,
 Thou onely must suruiue in perfect soule ;
 And in the soule, are no affections :
 We powre out our affections with our bloud ;
 And with our blouds affections, fade our loues. 35
 " No life hath loue in such sweet state, as this ;
 " No essence is so deare to moodie sense,
 " As flesh, and bloud ; whose quintessence is sense.
 " Beautie, compos'd of bloud, and flesh, moues more,
 " And is more plausible to bloud, and flesh, 40
 " Then spirituall beautie can be to the spirit.
 Such apprehension, as we haue in dreames
 (When sleepe, the bond of senses, locks them vp) Such shall we haue, when death destroies them quite.
 If loue be then thy object, change not life ; 45
 Liue high, and happy still : I still below,
 Close with my fortunes, in thy height, shall ioy.
 I v l i. Ay me, that vertue, whose braue eagles wings
 With euery stroke, blow starres, in burning heauen ;
 Should like a swallow (preying towards stormes) 50

 Pursue those objects, which none else can see,
 But seeme to all the world, the emptie aire.
 Thus thou (poore O v i d) and all vertuous men Must prey like swallowes, on inuisible foode ; 55
 Pursuing flies, or nothing : and thus loue,
 And euery worldly phansie, is transpos'd,
 By worldly tyrannie, to what plight it list.

What thinke *you three, of VIRGIL, gentlemen,
(That are of his profession, though rankt higher)
Or HORACE, what saist thou, that art the poorest,
And likeliest to enuy, or to detract ?

HOR. CAESAR speakes after common men, in this,
80 To make a difference of me, for my poorenesse :

As if the filth of pouertie sunke as deepe

Into a knowing spirit, as the bane

Of riches doth, into an ignorant soule.

No, CAESAR, they be path-lesse, moorish minds,

85 That being once made rotten with the dung

Of damned riches, euer after sinke

Beneath the steps of any villanie.

But knowledge is the nectar, that keepees sweet

A perfect soule, euen in this graue of sinne ;

90 And for my soule, it is as free, as CAESARS :

For, what I know is due, I'le giue to all.

" He that detracts, or enuies vertuous merit,

" Is still the couetous, and the ignorant spirit.

CAES. Thankes, HORACE, for thy free, and holosome sharpnesse :

95 Which pleaseth CAESAR more, then seruile fawnes.

" A flatterd prince soone turnes the prince of fooles.

And for thy sake, wee'll put no difference more

Betweene the great, and good, for being poore.

Say then, lou'd HORACE, thy true thought of VIRGIL.

100 HOR. I iudge him of a rectified spirit,

By many reuolutions of discourse

(In his bright reasons influence) refin'd

From all the tartarous moodes of common men ;

Bearing the nature, and similitude

105 Of a right heauenly bodie : most seure

And then as cleare, and confident, as I o v e.

G A L L. And yet so chaste, and tender is his eare,
In suffering any syllable to passe,
That, he thinks, may become the honour'd name 110
Of issue to his so examin'd selfe ;
That all the lasting fruits of his full merit
In his owne poemes, he doth still distaste :
As if his mindes peece, which he stroue to paint,
Could not with fleshly pencils haue her right. 115

T I B V. But, to approue his workes of soueraigne worth,
This obseruation (me thinkes) more then serues :
And is not vulgar. That, which he hath writ,
Is with such iudgement, labour'd, and distill'd
Through all the needfull vses of our liues, 120
That could a man remember but his lines,
He should not touch at any serious point,
But he might breathe his spirit out of him.

As fit for any conference, he can vse ? 125

What thinks materiall H O R A C E, of his learning ?

H O R A. His learning labours not the schoole-like glosse,

That most consists in ecchoing wordes, and termes, 130
And soonest wins a man an empty name :
Nor any long, or far-fetcht circumstance,
Wrapt in the curious generalties of artes :
But a direct, and analyticke summe
Of all the worth and first effects of artes. 135
And for his poesie, 'tis so ramm'd with life,
That it shall gather strength of life, with being,
And liue hereafter, more admir'd, then now.

CÆSAR, VIRGIL, MECÆNAS, GAL-

 EQVITES RO.

S^EE, here comes VIRGIL; we will rise and greet him :
 Welcome to CÆSAR, VIRGIL. CÆSAR, and VIRGIL

Shall differ but in sound ; to CÆSAR, VIRGIL
 (Of his expressed greatnesse) shall be made

5 A second sur-name, and to VIRGIL, CÆSAR.

Where are thy famous Æneids ? doe vs grace
 To let vs see, and surfet on their sight.

VIRG. Worthlesse they are of CÆSARS gracious eyes,
 If they were perfect ; much more with their wants :

10 Which yet are more, then my time could supply.

And, could great CÆSARS expectation

Be satisfied with any other seruice,

I would not shew them. CÆS. VIRGIL is too modest ;

Or seekes, in vaine, to make our longings more.

15 Shew them, sweet VIRGIL. VIRG. Then, in such due feare,

As fits presenters of great workes, to CÆSAR,

I humbly shew them. CÆS. Let vs now behold

A humane soule made visible in life ;

And more refulgent in a senselesse paper,

20 Then in the sensuall complement of Kings.

Read, read, thy selfe, deare VIRGIL, let not me

Prophane one accent, with an vntun'd tongue :

VIRG. It will be thought a thing ridiculous
To present eyes, and to all future times
A grosse vntruth ; that any poet (void 30

Should, with decorum, transcend CAESARS chaire.

We here haue turn'd thy booke, doe thou first reade.

VIRG. Great CAESAR hath his will : I will ascend.

That sweepes the cobwebs, from vn-used vertue, 50
And makes her shine proportion'd, to her worth,
To be more nice to entertaine his grace ;
Then he is choise, and liberall to afford it.

 Good troth, if I knew any man so vile,
 To act the crimes, these whippers reprehend, 55
 Or what their seruile apes gesticulate,
 I should not then much muse, their shreds were lik'd ;
 Since ill men haue a lust t' heare others sinnes,
 And good men haue a zeale to heare sinne sham'd.

 N A S. Yes, and ingenuously. A V T. Then, by the hope,
 Which I preferre vnto all other obiects,
 I can professe, I neuer writ that peece
 More innocent, or empty of offence. 75
 Some salt it had, but neyther tooth, nor gall,
 Nor was there in it any circumstance,
 Which, in the setting downe, I could suspect
 Might be peruerted by an enemies tongue.
 Onely, it had the fault to be call'd mine. 80
 That was the crime. P O L. No ? why, they say you tax'd
 The Law, and Lawyers ; Captaines ; and the Players
 By their particular names. A V T. It is not so.

- I vs'd no name. My Bookes haue still beene taught 85 To spare the persons, and to speake the vices.
 These are meere slanders, and enforc'd by such
 As haue no safer wayes to men's disgraces,
 But their owne lyes, and losse of honesty.
 Fellowes of practis'd, and most laxatiue tongues,
 90 Whose empty and eager bellies, i' the yeere,
 Compell their braynes to many desp'rate shifts;
 (I spare to name 'hem : for, their wretchednesse, Fury it selfe would pardon.) These, or such,
 Whether of malice, or of ignorance,
 95 Or itch, t'haue me their aduersary (I know not)
 Or all these mixt ; but sure I am, three yeeres,
 They did prouoke me with their petulant stiles
 On euery stage : And I at last, vnwilling,
 But weary, I confesse, of so much trouble,
 100 Thought, I would try, if shame could winne vpon 'hem.

SEJANUS HIS FALL

THE TEXT

The tragedy of Sejanus was entered on the Stationers' Register by Edward Blount on 2 November 1604. On March 19 he had entered Jonson's part of the King's Entertainment on his state entry into London for his coronation on March 15. Blount published this, and evidently accepted Sejanus, but on 6 August 1605, he transferred the play to Thomas Thorp. Thorp published it that year. The entries in the Register are as follows :

2 Novembris [1604]

Edward Blunt putt ouer to Thomas Thorp 6 Augusti 1605	Entred for his copy vnder thandes of Master Pasfeild and the Wardens a booke called the tragedie of Seianus written by Beniamin Johnson. vj^d

Arber, Transcript, III. 273.

6 Augusti [1605]

Thomas Thorpe	Entred for his copy by assignement of Edward Blunt the tragedie of Seianus which was entred to the said Edward 2 novembris ultimo. vj^d

Ibid. III. 297.

The play was damned when it was produced in 1603, and failure usually stimulated Jonson to publish at once. But delay was forced upon him: the Earl of Northampton summoned him before the Privy Council to answer for treasonable matter which that notorious intriguer detected in the writing.¹ The further delay in publishing after the registration and the transfer of copyright also point to difficulties. These may have been caused by the Eastward Ho trouble in 1605.

The collation, ¶, A to M in fours, with two leaves of N, is in detail : ¶ 1 Title-page. ¶ 2 'To the Readers'. ¶ 3 to A verso, 'In SEIANUM BEN. IONSONI', by George Chapman. A 2, 'To his worthy Friend, the Author', by Hugh Holland; 'To the deseruing Author', by Cygnus. A 2 verso, 'To his learned and beloued Friend', by Th. R. A 3, 'Amicis, amici nostri dignissimi, dignissimis', by John Marston; 'Vpon SEIANVS', by William Strachey. A 3 verso, 'To him that hath so excell'd on this excellent subiect', by ΦΙΛΟΞ;¹ 'To the most understanding Poet', by Ev. B. A 4, 'THE ARGUMENT'. A 4 verso, 'The names of the Actors'. B-N 2 recto, the text of the Play. The catchword on K 3 verso is misprinted 'PARE': it should be 'PRÆ.'

This is the first of Jonson's plays to have prefixed to it verse tributes from his friends; in his prefatory note he describes these tributes as 'voluntary labours', but his main object in printing them was to show the public, when the play had failed on the stage, that two contemporary dramatists and a group of judicious friends approved it.

The printer was George Eld (or Elde), who discharged his difficult task with a high degree of accuracy. The Latin historical notes reprinted in Appendix XI appeared in the margins of the Quarto text, and imposed a severe test upon a printer. A few corrections were made in the text while it passed through the press, but, even without this evidence, it is clear, from the small percentage of error in the notes, that a watchful eye supervised the printing.

There are two states of the title-page. The first state, reproduced in facsimile from Mr. Wise's copy, spells the printer's name 'Elld': so the British Museum copy and two of the Dyce copies, at South Kensington. The second state prints the name as 'Elde' and is proved to be a cancel by the watermark LR. The watermark in the text is a crowned HP with a quatrefoil ornament inside the H. The cancel is found in one of the Dyce copies and in the perfect Malone copy in Bodley.

Seven copies of the Quarto have been collated for the text of the present edition:

- (1) The British Museum copy, with the press-mark 644.
- b. 53, lacking sheets M and N (marked A in the list below).
- (2, 3). Two Bodleian copies in the Malone collection, with press-marks Malone 222.7 (B1) and Malone 184 (B2). The latter lacks the title-page and the second leaf.

(4) Mr. T. J. Wise's copy on large paper, with autograph inscription and some manuscript corrections (C).

(5-7) Three copies in the Dyce collection: one on large paper, formerly the Heber copy, with the book-plate of John William Cole and some manuscript corrections (D1); a cropped and stained copy with the 'Elldē' imprint, with no evidence of former ownership (D2); a copy formerly in the Roxburghe collection (D3). The first of these copies was sold for £1 13s. at the Heber sale in 1834; it is no. 3026 in the Sale Catalogue, part ii. Thomas Thorpe in his Catalogue for 1837, part viii (no. 1204) offered it, as the Cole copy, for one guinea. The Roxburghe copy fetched the handsome price of three shillings at the sale in 1812: it is no. 5227 in the Catalogue.

Mr. Wise's copy has on the title-page Jonson's inscription on presenting it to a friend: 'The Testemony of my Affection, & Obseruance to my noble Freind S^r Robert Townseehend¹ wth I desire may remayne wth him, & last beyond Marble.' The signature 'Ben: Jonson', appended to this, has been cropped by a binder, so that only the tops of the 'B', 'J' and the long 's' survive. The ink has browned, and there are a number of manuscript corrections in the same ink of printer's errors in the text: these are probably Jonson's, but as the corrections are facsimiles of printed letters and not his normal script, it is not possible to certify that they are his. On A 3 verso 'ΦΙΛΟΕ' is corrected to 'ΦΙΛΟΣ'. In B 2 line 5 (l. 71) 'accusers' is altered to 'Accusers', to balance the capital letters in 'Flatterers' just before; in line 9 (l. 75) 'of Rome', letters 'f Rom' have not caught the ink; they are supplied; in line 30 (l. 96) 'vnkindly)' has the first bracket inserted; the Folio drops the brackets altogether. In B 2 verso, line 9 (l. 113) 'kinsman' is corrected to 'kinsmen'. In B 4, line 19 (l. 235), 'hard' is corrected to 'heard'. In C 4 verso, line 13 (l. 568)

'dull, Camell' is corrected to 'dull Camell,'—the wrong comma being erased. In E 2, line 30 (II. 403) 'saftly' is corrected to 'safely'. In E 4 verso, line 27 (III. 67) 'These Princes Fathers,' a comma has been inserted after 'Princes'. In F 3, line 12 (III. 240) 'SEI.' is corrected to 'SIL.' In G, line 16 (III. 394), 'ARR.' is corrected to 'AFE.'. In G 3, line 4 (III. 530) 'pitty' is corrected to 'piety'.

It is noteworthy that these corrections, with only one addition and that an error—'MIN.' for 'MAC.' on K, line 7 (IV. 515)—are found in the Dyce large paper copy. A number of other errors, such as 'How blist a fate' (I. 402) and 'ARR.' for 'AGR.', which was copied in the Folio (II. 449), are not corrected in either copy. In the Wise copy a modern hand has tried to copy seventeenth-century script in 'Sandforde his Booke' at the top right-hand corner; this ink also is brown, so that 'Sandforde' apparently hoped to claim the corrections.

The Huth copy also had an autograph inscription on the fly-leaf: 'To my perfect Freind, M^r Francis Crane. / I erect this Altar of Freindship. And leaue it as the eternall Witnesse of my Love. / Ben: Jonson.' Francis Crane in April 1606 had a grant for life of the office of clerk of the Parliament, was secretary to Prince Charles, knighted on 4 September 1617, and became famous as the director of the tapestry works established at Mortlake under the patronage of James I in 1619. Beneath the inscription is a manuscript note in a contemporary hand: 'Hic est Ben: Johnson: ille cui in componendis fabulis parem nec vidit Antiquitas, nec posteritas visura est. F. M.'. This early owner was Francis Mundy, who has written his name on a fly-leaf at the end; Jonson would have appreciated such a tribute. The copy is on large paper and in the original vellum binding; it has the two blank leaves at the beginning, one of which comprises the inscription, and one blank leaf at the end with Mundy's autograph. It also belonged to Richard Rawlinson; Whalley thanks him for the loan of it in the preface to his edition. At the Rawlinson sale in 1757 it fetched 3s. 6d.¹ Later owners were the Rev. John Field, at whose sale in 1827 the price rose to £22. 10s.;² and George Daniel, whose library was sold at Sotheby's in July 1864; it is no. 951 in the Sale Catalogue, and fetched £106.

The seven copies collated yield an instructive list of corrections and minor alterations made while the book was passing through the press. The changes in the preliminary sheet are in Chapman's long poem of commendation, and show Jonson's scrupulous care to reproduce the punctuation and emphatic capitals of the manuscript. The adjustment of the capital letters in printing the consul's opening formula in v. 523-4, so as to make it uniform with lines 514-21 and 533, shows how carefully Jonson watched the printer. But the most significant of these press-corrections is the note on 'Spelunca' (iv. 48) 'Prætoriiū Sueto. appellat. Tib. cap. 39*', which is not found in the British Museum copy. Jonson added it in the proof.

The following is a list of all the corrections which have been traced. It does not include accidents which happened in the printing, such as 'SEI.' in the fourth line of B 3 verso, where the stop is clear in the first and second Dyce copies, faint in the third, and missing in the British Museum copy.

In a few passages the Quarto supplies a correction for the Folio. In 11. 257-9 the Folio reading :

Nought is more high,
Daring, or desperate, then offenders found ;
Where guilt is, rage, and courage doth abound.

is possible, but the Quarto has 'rage, and courage both abound', and 'doth' is almost certainly a misprint—it cannot be a correction—in the later text. In lines 266-8 the Quarto reads :

Thus, with slight

You shall disarme them first, and they (in night
Of their ambition) not perceiue the Traine.

The Folio has the second line in the unmetrical form :

' You shall disarme first, and they (in night) . . .

In line 400 the Quarto has 'till all my lets be clear'd'; the Folio, copied by its successor in 1640, misprints 'my betts'.

In 11. 434 we have accepted the Quarto reading because the Folio printer appears to have misunderstood this punctuation. The Quarto reads :

How can that be, when ther's no gaine, but vertu's ?

The Folio :

How can that be, when there's no gaine, but vertuous ?
Here the later printer attempted to expand the contraction as he supposed it to be, and Jonson overlooked the change.

The text of the 1616 Folio was set up from a corrected copy of the Quarto. But in the course of the printing Jonson made further changes. He corrected no less than eighty passages in this final and authoritative text. Sometimes he improved a reading, more frequently he revised minutiae of spelling, punctuation, and wrong type. One noteworthy feature is that he reduced the number of passages marked as ' sentences ' or maxims on life and conduct by inverted commas printed at the beginning of the line : he reserved this pointing, as a rule, for pure γνώμαι, for example :

" Men are deceiu'd, who thinke there can be thrall
" Beneath a vertuous prince. Wish'd liberty
" Ne're louelier lookes, then vnder such a crowne.

I. 407-9

But, where the effects of these sententious comments was more definitely dramatic, especially in the thrust and parry of dialogue, he seems to have thought it unnecessary to retain the inverted commas, as in II. 173-87, which the Quarto prints thus :

„ State is inough to make th'act iust, them guilty.
„ TIB. Long hate pursues such acts. SEI. Whom hatred frights,
„ Let him not dreame on sou'raignty. TIB. Are rites
„ Of faith, loue, pietie, to be trod downe ?
„ Forgotten ? and made vaine ? SEI. All for a Crowne.
„ The Prince, who shames a Tyrannes name to beare,
„ Shall neuer dare do anything, but feare ;
„ All the Command of Sceptres quite doth perish
„ If it begin religious thoughts to cherish :
„ Whole Empires fall, swaid by these nice respects ;
„ It is the licence of darke deeds protects

„ Eu'n states most hated, when no lawes resist
 „ The sword, but that it acteth what it list.
 „ TIB. Yet so we may do all things cruelly,
 „ Not safely : SEI. Yes, and do them throughly.

All Jonson's changes are recorded in the critical apparatus. The most striking of them all, not only in this play, but in the entire text of the Folio, is found in Act iv, lines 434-9, where Laco, Pomponius, and Minutius, overheard by Lepidus and Arruntius, discuss Tiberius' vacillating policy towards Sejanus. Where the winds blow so contrary, these harassed courtiers do not know how to trim their sails. Laco frankly despairs of a solution, but Pomponius, though admittedly puzzled, concludes that it is safe to follow Sejanus : he ' still goes on, And mounts '.

In the dialogue that follows, the Folio, following the Quarto, printed at first :

More altars smoke to him, then all the gods :
 What would wee more ? (ARR. That the deare smoke would choke him.)

LAC. But there are letters come (they say) eu'n now,
 Which do forbid that last. MIN. Do you heare so ? LAC. Yes.

POM. By CASTOR, that's the worst. (ARR. By POLLVX, best.)

This was revised in proof to :

What would wee more ? (ARR. That the deare smoke
 would choke him,

That would I more. LEP. Peace, good ARRVNTIVS.)

LAC. But there are letters come . . .

POM. By POLLVX, that's the worst. (ARR. By HERCVLES, best.)

And this revised text was printed in the Folio of 1640.

The change was made on the authority of Aulus Gellius, who stated that ' in old writings Roman women do not swear by Hercules, nor men by Castor ', but that both sexes might swear by Pollux.¹ If Jonson had known this earlier,

he would probably have added a marginal note about it in the Quarto. He observed this nice distinction in Catiline, making Curius swear by Hercules, Sempronia and Fulvia by Castor.¹

The other textual changes are slight. They include the substitution of 'the issue of Germanicus (who were next in hope for the succession)' for '(who were next in hope)' (Argument, 17); 'retyred life' for 'separated life' (ibid. 26); 'and with a long doubtfull letter, in one day, hath him suspected' for 'with one letter and in one day . . .' (ibid. 36-7); 'Breed out of too fit matter' for 'Breed out of too much humour' (III. 690); 'the ready sword' for 'the facile sword' (IV. 155); 'Mingling his honours' for 'Mixing his honours' (IV. 450); 'As if his statues now were sensiuue growne' for '. . . now were sensitiue' (V. 768). In all these examples the original reading of the Folio agrees with the Quarto text.

In III. 707 the proof seems to have been miscorrected. The Folio alters the 'Sauiour' of the Quarto to 'Sauier'. Jonson apparently intended to write 'Sauer': either he corrected the copy imperfectly, not striking out the 'i', or the compositor misread and contaminated the spellings.

Both the authoritative texts of Sejanus show traces of peculiar forms of spelling and punctuation which Jonson affected. He tried to classicize the spelling of Greek and Latin derivatives. On the title-page and in the note on the first performance, printed at the end of the play, the Folio spells 'Tragœdie' and 'Tragœdians', and it prints 'adscribe' in V. 103. Both texts have 'sphære' (I. 3) and 'apprênded' (V. 648), and 'tyran' is a usual spelling. But the Quarto preserves more of these spellings than the Folio: for example, 'æmulation', 'æquall', 'vnæquall', 'vnæquald', 'chord' (for 'cord'), 'phant'sie', 'prætext', 'præscrib'd', 'præcedent', 'præuent'.² The texts are inconsistent with themselves and each other, probably because the printer rebelled; but Jonson's intention is made clear in Cynthia's Revels v. x. 7, 9, where he altered in the proof comédie to comœdie.

Sejanus also yields many examples of a metrical punctuation designed to mark the presence of an extra syllable lightly sounded in the movement of the line.¹ This punctuation appears intermittently in his printed texts, but nowhere so frequently as in this play. Naturally the printer often overlooked it; if he thought about it at all, he probably regarded it as a misprint. Jonson opened the second book of his English Grammar with a short chapter 'Of Apostrophus', and defined it as 'an affection of words coupled, and joyned together'; dealing with its use to mark elisions, he complained: 'The note whereof, though it many times, through the negligence of Writers and Printers, is quite omitted, yet by right should, and of the learned sort hath his signe and marks, which is such a Semicircle' placed in the top.' The frequent appearance—or shall we say, survival?—of this punctuation-mark in Sejanus is another indication of Jonson's supervision of the printing of this play. Donne was a poet 'of the learned sort' who employed it; Professor Grierson's text of the Poems has over ninety examples.

¹ Mr. M. A. Bayfield, in A Study of Shakespeare's Versification with an Examination of the 1616 Folio of Ben Jonson's Works, pp. 295–313, subjects the text of Sejanus to a minute analysis and classifies these verse elisions. He would expand all the contractions. A number of these expansions we cannot accept, and we do not share his contempt for the printers of the texts of Shakespeare and Jonson. For example, Mr. Bayfield consistently ignores the effect of a pause in the line: as in

And now we better thinke—who's there, within? (III. 629.)

By trusted messengers. If 't be enquired. (III. 710.)

To fight vs from it. ARR. 'T hath so, on SABINVS. (IV. 283.)

Can best deliuer you. MAC. (When h' is away. (V. 135.)

Jonson in his later work used these looser rhythms which Mr. Bayfield would import into the text here, but he did not use them so early as 1605. In such a line as 'Deuided as in time o'th' civill warre' (II. 370) Mr. Bayfield injures his case by such comment as 'Thevill cannot be said without sounding at least slightly the e of "the"', and this Jonson must have expected to be done' (p. 305.) Of course, the 'th' goes with the 'o'. On the general question we may refer to the comments on Jonson's Grammar in vol. II, pp. 428–31.

The following are instances in Sejanus :

In mites, as small as atomi, to'vndoe. (I. 257.)
 And can but deedes of men : 'twere glory' inough. (I. 478.)
 The meanes that wrought it. How do'I looke to day?
 (II. 59.)
 You carry things too—let me borrow' a man. (v. 157.)

The mark is found even at a pause in the line, which would carry the extra syllable :

He was a man most like to vertue' ; In all. (I. 124.)
 Our mother, great AVGVSTA, 'is strooke with time. (III. 53.)
 And yet, for any weightie, 'and great affaie. (III. 611.)

All these have their counterpart in Donne, whose handling of verse was much freer than Jonson's :

So to' entergraft our hands, as yet. (The Extasie, 9.)
 So in the country 'is beauty ; to this place. (To the Countesse of Bedford, 13 : Grierson, p. 191.)
 Like one who' in her third widdowhood doth professe. (To Mr. Rowland Woodward, 1 : Grierson, p. 185.)
 His letter at thy pillow 'hath laid (A Valediction, 51.)
 Lest that preserve thee' ; and since my love is spent (The Apparition, 15.)
 We' have added to the world Virginia, 'and sent (To the Countesse of Bedford, 67 : Grierson, p. 197.)
 Here's no more newes, then vertue, 'I may as well. (To S^r Henry Wotton, 1 : Grierson, p. 187.)

That the printers were perplexed by this punctuation is shown by their inconsistent treatment of it. In I. 448 the Quarto prints 'To' a Princes state', the Folio 'T' a princes state' ; in III. 69 'he had' (Quarto) becomes 'h' had' in the Folio ; both texts print in v. 8 'my' aduanced head', but in v. 351 'm' instructions' ; 'they' are' is in both texts in II. 405, v. 787, but in II. 232 the Folio abbreviates to 'they're'. Jonson's proof-reading was probably done at the printing-house from fresh pulls supplied to him on the spot ;¹ he worried the printer enough with his more important corrections, and could not adjust such abbreviations as 'T' a' and 'they're', which indicated his scansion, if not exactly, yet sufficiently for his purpose; and he either overlooked, or found he could not insist on correcting, lines in which this metrical punctuation had slipped out in his revised text. But there can be no doubt about his practice, and we have, therefore, felt justified in restoring from the Quarto the apostrophe omitted in thirteen lines of the Folio.

beleue me', I loue him. (I. 111.)¹
 Had meanes to know' him. (I. 122.)
 You are vnhappy 'in me (IV. 32.)
 May' I shake my head. (IV. 308.)
 So' in trust. (IV. 516.)
 I'haue waited. (V. 212.)
 The' amazing wonder. (V. 221.)
 I alreadie' haue done. (V. 255.)
 . . . most happy', and ere . . . (V. 335.)¹
 . . . thou' hast satisfied. (V. 366.)
 You' are troublesome. (V. 428.)
 . . . thy' obsequious fatnesse. (V. 459.)
 They'are met. (V. 460.)

So far the evidence is clear, but the failure of the Folio printer to deal faithfully with these subtleties of the poet's manuscript leaves some doubtful readings. In I. 268 the Folio reading

He's the noblest Romane, when he takes—where the Quarto read 'He' is', is probably correct; 'He' is emphatic. Similarly in line 276, the abrupt is a hasty parenthesis interrupting Sejanus' measured and calculated speech when he is first probing Eudemus: we cannot substitute the false emphasis of 'Who is that? Satrius—'. The pause after 'SATRIVS' amply fills the line.

Who's that? SATRIVS—I haue a grieve, sir,

¹ In these examples the apostrophe has dropped out because of the comma below.

Later in the scene (320-1), Sejanus' description of Livia :

I know, she's quick, and quaintly spirited,
And will haue strange thoughts, when she's at leasure ;
the reading raises a doubt, but the Quarto has ' sh' is ', and the Folio is confirmed by Jonson's own correction in proof of the Folio text in Every Man out of His Humour, v. ii. 23-4, ' he's a gentleman ' : here Jonson himself corrected the printer's ' h'is '. In Sejanus v. 483 the Folio corrects the Quarto ' I, hee' is wise ' to ' I, he is wise '. But the reading in III. 465-6

Meane time, giue order, that his bookes be burn't,
To the' Ædiles. SEI. You haue well aduis'd.

is suspect. Whalley thought that Jonson here pronounced ' Ædiles ' as a Latin word of three syllables ; he was probably right, and we can dispense with the apostrophe. In v. 109

You' are a friend most welcome : by, and by it certainly seems incorrect. In I. 152, 244, 534, and 559 we have expanded ' temp'rance ', ' Emp'rour ', ' flatt'ring ', and ' emp'rour ' ; and have removed the apostrophe from III. 526,

Of AGRIPPINA ; 'and for dear regard.

Two difficult examples at the end of the play seem to call for readjustment. Sejanus is sentenced

To lose his head : which was no sooner off,
But that, and th' vnfortunate trunk were seiz'd
By the rude multitude. (v. 806-8.)
Let this example moouē th' insolent man. (v. 898.)

With some hesitation we have expanded the ' the '. The Quarto yields a clue by the spellings ' fauo'ring ', in I. 446, and ' scrupu'lous ', in v. 89, 190 ; and, similarly, the Folio text of Epigram xlviii. 3 reads ' Due'llists '. Jonson seems to have written in the Sejanus lines ' the 'vnfortunate ' ' the 'insolent', or possibly even ' the inso'lent ', ' the vnfortu'nate' and baffled the printer. In III. 421 both texts read 'worthi'st men', which we assume to have been 'worthi'est' in his manuscript.¹

It is easy to show how subtle Jonson's punctuation could be. Two examples occur in the duel of the two great gladiators at the crisis of the third act. The speech in which Sejanus makes his fatal proposal to marry Livia opens in the Folio with the words (III. 503)—

Sir—I' haue been so long train'd vp in grace.

The Quarto prints 'I haue', and the line, so printed, scans. But after 'Sir', Sejanus pauses or clears his throat before he plunges into the proposal, and this revised punctuation treats the break as equivalent to a syllable. Tiberius' reply contains the second example, unfortunately discarded in the Folio, which reads :

We cannot but commend thy pietie,
Most-lou'd SEIANVS, in acknowledging
Those bounties ; which we, faintly, such remember.

The Quarto prints 'Those, bounties', Tiberius affecting modesty : 'Those—well, call them bounties if you like'. In some copies of the Quarto the comma is faintly printed. It is tempting to restore it, but Jonson in the Folio proof corrected the end of the line,² and with this evidence that his attention was fixed upon the passage we must accept the text he left us. But we more than suspect that the disappearance of this delicate stroke of dissimulation was due to accident.

Further evidence of Jonson's regard for these fine shades of punctuation is supplied by Macro's words to Tiberius

The humblest place in CAESARS choice, or trust,
May make glad MACRO proud ; without ambition :
Saeue to do CAESAR service.³

¹ Cf. Donne, The Second Anniversary, 390, 'And beauty worthy'st is to move'. In Sejanus III. 680 'worthiest MACRO', and in I. 313 'which was the wittiest ? meriest ? wantonnest ?' are in both texts.

² From 'we faintly, such,' to 'we, faintly, such'.

³ III. 666–8.

and Sejanus' hope that, earthly opposition failing, the gods might fight him.

That were worth
SEIANVS strife : durst fates but bring it forth.¹

The colons after 'ambition' and 'strife' were inserted in the proof to mark an emphatic pause: the Quarto had commas, which the Folio reproduced at first.

The Folio of 1640 reprints the 1616 text, with a few corrections,² but its changes are usually errors. It follows most of the press-corrections made in 1616, but it reprints the first state of L13 (III. 661-703), L14 verso (IV. 34-76) and Oo verso (V. 764-807). Its chief blunders are 'and' for 'at' in I. 515; 'ablest' for 'abled' in II. 11, a modernizing suggested by the context, 'the most apt, and abled instrument'; 'soone' for 'some' in IV. 156, 'We might haue some assurance of our vowes'; and, in the same scene, 'I neuer look't' for 'I neerer look't' (line 183), a change which reduces the text to nonsense. On the other hand, the Folio watches the punctuation: it tends to modernize. Thus it omits the metrical apostrophe, which is such a marked feature of the two earlier texts; and it freely employs the semicolon in order to get a more logical stopping. This is substituted for the comma fourteen times in the first act.³ Occasionally the use is effective, as in

Hee hath my heart, and voice,
When I would curse ; he, he. (II. 425-6).

and in

NERO, and DRUSUS, these shall be to you
In place of parents, these your fathers, these ;⁴
And not unfitly. (III. 78-80.)

² It is worth recording that this text is the first to print the accents correctly in 'Εμοὶ θανάτος γαῖα μυχθήτω πύρι (II. 330). Was this a correction of Sir Kenelm Digby's?

³ See the critical apparatus at lines 40, 50, 61, 152, 204, 210, 222, 292, 368, 464, 470, 529, 538, 554.

⁴ The Quarto had achieved the same effect by printing 'These' with an emphatic capital letter.

But these must be offset by a bad blunder in iv. 233,

The fault's not shamefull ; villanie makes a fault.

The stop inserted after 'shamefull' is an intruder: the line means 'The fault which villany makes a fault is not shameful'. It is curious that an idiom so common as the absence of the relative pronoun caused a difficulty.

Francis Cunningham's statement in his reissue of Gifford's text, 1875, Vol. III, p. 485, that the editor of the 1640 Folio, which he rashly describes as 'that almost worthless edition', used a copy of Sejanus with a few corrections by the author, is wrong. He found, without knowing it, a number of proof-corrections of the 1616 Folio which were reproduced in the 1640 Folio, in particular the insertion in Act iv, lines 435-6. These finishing touches were not in the copy of the 1616 text which he himself used, and, though he rightly saw their textual importance, he misjudged their origin.

Two sound reprints of the 1616 Folio text have appeared in recent years. The play was included in Professor Bang's reprint of the Folio in his Materialien zur Kunde der älteren Englischen Dramas (Louvain, 1908); and in 1911 Professor W. Dinsmore Briggs edited it for Heath's Belles Lettres series, with a critical apparatus which recorded a number of the original press-corrections. He collated three copies of the Folio, those in the Harvard Library and in the collections of Mr. Otto Miller and Professor W. L. Phelps. In a note on pages 265-6, the test passage of the Roman oaths (iv. 434-9), he justly criticizes the attempt of Messrs. Bastiaan A. P. Van Dam and Cornelis Stoffel in Anglia, xxvi. 377-92 to invalidate the authority of the 1616 Folio. These critics confined their attention to the text of Every Man out of his Humour and the differences of the Quartos and the Folio in that single play. They argued that the textual changes were not made by Jonson himself, but were the arbitrary tinkering of a compositor. Their complete ignorance of the Folio text as a whole and of the way in which it was produced makes it unnecessary to enter on a detailed refutation of their theory.

15 Lo.] Lord-

To the Readers.

THE following, and voluntary Labours of my Friends, prefix to my Booke, haue releui'd me in much, whereat (without them) I should necessarilie haue touch'd: Now, I will onely vse three or foure short, and needfull Notes, and 5 so rest.

First, if it be obiected, that what I publish is no true Poëme; in the strict Lawes of Time. I confesse it: as also in the want of a proper Chorus, whose Habite, and Moodes are such, and so difficult, as not any, whome I haue seene
 10 since the Auntients, (no, not they who haue most presently affected Lawes) haue yet come in the way off. Nor is it needful, or almost possible, in these our Times, and to such Auditors, as commonly Things are presented, to obserue the ould state, and splendour of Drammatick Poëmes, with pre-
 15 seruation of any popular delight. But of this I shall take more seasonable cause to speake; in my Obseruations vpon Horace his Art of Poetry, which (with the Text translated) I intend, shortly to publish. In the meane time, if in truth of Argument, dignity of Persons, grauity and height of Elocu-
 20 tion, fulnesse and frequencie of Sentence, I haue discharg'd the other offices of a Tragick writer, let not the absence of these Formes be imputed to me, wherein I shall giue you occasion hereafter (and without my boast) to thinke I could better prescribe, then omit the due use, for want of a con-
 25 uenient knowledge.

The next is, least in some nice nostrill, the Quotations might sauour affected, I doe let you know, that I abhor nothing more; and haue onely done it to shew my integrity in the Story, and saue my selfe in those common Torturers, 30 that bring all wit to the Rack: whose Noses are euer like Swine spoyling, and rooting up the Muses Gardens, and their whole Bodies, like Moles, as blindly working vnder Earth to cast any, the least, hilles vpon Vertue.

Whereas, they are in Latine and the worke in English, it was presupposd, none but the Learned would take the paynes 35 to conferre them, the Authors themselues being all in the learned Tongues, saue one, with whose English side I haue had little to doe : To which it may be required, since I haue quoted the Page, to name what Edition I follow'd. Tacit. Lips. in 4°. Antuerp. edit. 600. Dio. Folio Hen. Step. 92. 40 For the rest, as Sueton. Seneca. &c. the Chapter doth sufficiently direct, or the Edition is not varied.

Lastly I would informe you, that this Booke, in all numbers, is not the same with that which was acted on the publike Stage, wherein a second Pen had good share : in 45 place of which I haue rather chosen, to put weaker (and no doubt lesse pleasing) of mine own, then to defraud so happy a Genius of his right, by my lothed vsurpation.

Fare you well. And if you read farder of me, and like, I shall not be afraid of it though you praise me out. 50

Neque enim mihi cornea fibra est.

But that I should plant my felicity, in your generall saying Good, or Well, &c. were a weaknesse which the better sort of you might worthily contemne, if not absolutely hate me for. 55

The Argument.

Ælius Seianus, sonne to Seius Strabo, a gentleman of Rome, and borne at Vulsinium, after his long service in court; first, under Augustus, afterward, Tiberius: grew into that fauour with the latter, and won him by those artes, as there
 5 wanted nothing, but the name, to make him a copartner of the Empire. Which greatnesse of his, Drusus, the Emperors sonne, not brooking, after many smother'd dislikes (it one day breaking out) the Prince strooke him publikely on the face. To reuenge which disgrace, Liuia, the wife of Drusus (being before 10 corrupted by him to her dishonour, and the discouery of her husbands counsell) Seianus practiseth with, together with her Physitian, called Eudemus, and one Lygdus, an Eunuch, to poyson Drusus. This their inhumane act hauing successefull, and unsuspected passage, it emboldeneth Seianus to farther, &
 15 more insolent proiects, euen the ambition of the Empire: where finding the lets, he must encounter, to be many, & hard, in respect of the issue of Germanicus (who were next in hope for the succession) he deuisseth to make Tiberius selfe, his meanes: & instill's into his eares many doubts, and suspicions, both 20 against the Princes, and their mother Agrippina: which Cæsar iealously hearkning to, as couetously consenteth to their ruine, and their friends. In this time, the better to mature and strengthen his designe, Seianus labors to marry Liuia, and retyred life : the latter of which, Tiberius (out of a pronenesse to lust, and a desire to hide those vnnaturall pleasures, which he could not so publicly practise) embraceth : the former inkind-leth his feares, and there, giues him first cause of doubt, or suspect toward Seianus. Against whom, he raiseth (in priuate) 30 a new instrument, one Sertorius Macro, and by him vnder-worketh, discouers the others counsells, his meanes, his ends, sounds the affections of the Senators, diuides, distracts them :

at last, when Seianus least looketh, and is most secure (with pretext of doing him an vn-wonted honour in the Senate) he 35 traines him from his guardes, and with a long doubtfull letter, in one day, hath him suspected, accused, condemned, and torne

We want the fine arts, & their thriuing vse, 5
Should make vs grac'd, or fauour'd of the times :
We haue no shift of faces, no cleft tongues,
No soft, and glutinous bodies, that can sticke,
Like snailes, on painted walls ; or, on our brests,

We did by slauerie, not by seruice, clime.
We are no guilty men, and then no great ;
We haue nor place in court, office in state,
That we can say, we owe vnto our crimes :
We burne with no black secrets, which can make 15

The great SEIANVS clients: There be two,
Know more, then honest counsellors: whose close breasts

- 25 Were they rip'd vp to light, it would be found
A poore, and idle sinne, to which their trunks
Had not beene made fit organs. These can lye,
Flatter, and sweare, forswear, deprave, informe,
Smile, and betray; make guilty men; then beg 30 The forfeit liues, to get the liuings; cut
Mens throates with whisprings; sell to gaping sutors
The emptie smoake, that flies about the Palace;
Laugh, when their patron laughs; sweat, when he sweates;
Be hot, and cold with him; change euery moode,
35 Habit, and garbe, as often as he varies;
Obserue him, as his watch obserues his clocke;
And true, as turkise in the deare lords ring,
Looke well, or ill with him: ready to praise
His lordship, if he spit, or but pisse faire, 40 Haue an indifferent stoole, or breake winde well,
Nothing can scape their catch. SAB. Alas! these things
Deserue no note, confer'd with other vile,
And filthier flatteries, that corrupt the times:

The great AVGVSTA, VRGVLANIA,
MVTILIA PRISCA, and PLANCINA, diuers—

SEI. And, all these tell you the particulars
Of euery seuerall grieft ? how first it grew,
And then encreas'd, what action caused that ; 295
What passion that : and answer to each point
That you will put 'hem. EV D. Else, my lord, we know not How to prescribe the remedies. SEI. Goe to,
Yo'are a subtill nation, you Physitians !
And growne the onely cabinets, in court, 300
To ladies priuacies. Faith which of these
Is the most pleasant lady, in her physicke ?
Come, you are modest now. EV D. 'Tis fit my lord.

SEI. Why, sir, I doe not aske you of their vrines,
Whose smel's most violet ? or whose seige is best ? 305
Or who makes hardest faces on her stool ?
Which lady sleepes with her owne face, a nights ?
Which puts her teeth off, with her clothes, in court ?
Or, which her hayre ? which her complexion ?
And, in which boxe she puts it ? These were questions 310
That might, perhaps, haue put your grauity
To some defence of blush. But, I enquir'd,
Which was the wittiest ? meriest ? wantonnest ?
Harmelesse intergatories, but conceipts.
Me thinks, AVGVSTA should be most peruerse, 315
And froward in her fit ? EV D. She's so, my lord.

SEI. I knew it. And MVTILIA the most iocund ?
EV D. 'Tis very true, my lord. SEI. And why would you Conceale this from me, now ? Come, what's LIVIA ?
I know, she's quick, and quaintly spirited, 320
And will haue strange thoughts, when she's at leasure ;
She tells 'hem all to you ? EV D. My noblest lord,

SEIANVS, LIVIA, EVDEMVS.

Physitian, thou art worthy of a prouince,
 For the great fauours done vnto our loues ;
 And, but that greatest LIVIA beares a part
 In the requitall of thy seruices,
 I should alone, despaire of ought, like meanes, 5
 To giue them worthy satisfaction.

LIV. EVDEMVS, (I will see it) shall receiue
 A fit, and full reward, for his large merit.
 But for this potion, we intend to DRVSVS,
 (No more our husband, now) whom shall we choose 10
 As the most apt, and abled instrument,
 To minister it to him ? EV D. I say, LYG DVS.

SEI. LYG DVS ? what's he ? LIV. An Eunuch
 DRVSVS loues.

EV D. I, and his cup-bearer. SEI. Name not a second.
 If DRVSVS loue him, and he haue that place, 15
 We cannot thinke a fitter. EV D. True, my lord,
 For free accesse, and trust, are two maine aides.

SEI. Skilfull physitian ! LIV. But he must be wrought
 To th'vndertaking, with some labour'd arte.

SEI. Is he ambitious ? LIV. No. SEI. Or couetous ? 20

LIV. Neither. EV D. Yet, gold is a good generall charme.

SEI. What is he then ? LIV. Faith, only wanton, light.

SEI. How ! Is he young ? and faire ? EV D. A delicate youth.

SEI. Send him to me, I'll worke him. Royall ladie,
 Though I haue lou'd you long, and with that height 25

 The times, the gouernments, a profest champion,
 For the old libertie—— T I B. A perishing wretch.
 As if there were that chaos bred in things,
 That lawes, and libertie would not rather choose
 To be quite broken, and tane hence by vs, 315
 Then haue the staine to be preseru'd by such.
 Haue we the meanes, to make these guiltie, first ?

S E I. Trust that to me : let C A E S A R, by his power,
 But cause a formall meeting of the Senate,
 I will haue matter, and accusers readie. 320

T I B. But how? let vs consult. S E I. Wee shall mispend

The time of action. Counsels are vnfit
 In businesse, where all rest is more pernicious
 Then rashnesse can be. Acts of this close kind Thriue more by execution, then aduice. 325

 Which cannot praised be, vntill through done.

 Their often meeting. You forgot t' extoll
 The hospitable ladie ? POS. No, that tricke
 Was well put home, and had succeeded too,

345 But that SABINVS cought a caution out ;
 For she began to swell : SEI. And may she burst.

 Out of his closenesse. Giue ARRVNTIVS words
 Of malice against CAESAR; so, to GALLVS: 355
 But (aboue all) to AGRIPPINA. Say,
 (As you may truely) that her infinite pride,
 Propt with the hopes of her too fruitfull wombe,
 With popular studies gapes for soueraigntie;
 And threatens CAESAR. Pray AVGVSTA then, 360
 That for her owne, great CAESARS, and the pub-

 CAESAR is too secure (he must be told,
 And best hee'll take it from a mothers tongue.)
 Alas! what is 't for vs to sound, t' explore, 365

But to thy suit. The rest of mortall men,
In all their drifts, and counsels, pursue profit :
535 Princes, alone, are of a different sort,
Directing their maine actions still to fame.
We therefore will take time to thinke, and answer.

 If LIVIAS marriage should (as 'twere in parts) 545

 In which great worke, perhaps, our stay will be Beyond our will produc't. Now, since we are 675

 Out of our shortest absence, in a state
 So subiect vnto enuie, and embroild
 With hate, and faction ; we haue thought on thee,

MACRO.

I Will not aske, why C A E S A R bids doe this :
 But ioy, that he bids me. It is the blisse . 715
 Of courts, to be imploy'd ; no matter, how :
 A princes power makes all his actions vertue.
 We, whom he workes by, are dumbe instruments,
 To doe, but not enquire : His great intents
 Are to be seru'd, not search'd. Yet, as that bow 720
 Is most in hand, whose owner best doth know
 T'affect his aymes, so let that states-man hope
 Most vse, most price, can hit his princes scope.
 Nor must he looke at what, or whom to strike,
 But loose at all ; each marke must be alike. 725
 Were it to plot against the fame, the life
 Of one, with whom I twin'd ; remoue a wife
 From my warme side, as lou'd, as is the ayre ;
 Practise away each parent ; draw mine heyre
 In compasse, though but one ; worke all my kin 730
 To swift perdition ; leaue no vntrain'd engin,
 For friendship, or for innocence ; nay, make
 The gods all guiltie : I would vndertake
 This, being impos'd me, both with gaine, and ease.
 The way to rise, is to obey, and please. 735
 He that will thriue in state, he must neglect
 The trodden paths, that truth and right respect ;
 And proue new, wilder wayes : for vertue, there,
 Is not that narrow thing, shee is else-where.
 Mens fortune there is vertue ; reason, their will : 740
 Their licence, law ; and their obseruance, skill.
 Occasion, is their foile ; conscience, their staine ;
 Profit, their lustre : and what else is, vaine.

 I See well requited, and accept of nobly.
 Here place your selues, betweene the rooffe, and seeling, 95
 And when I bring him to his wordes of danger, Reueale your selues, and take him. RVF. Is he come ?

LAT. I'll now goe fetch him. OPS. With good speed.

I long

To merit from the state, in such an action.

RVF. I hope, it will obtayne the Consul-ship 100

 I To this afflicted house : that not like others,
 (The friends of season) you doe follow fortune,
 And in the winter of their fate, forsake
 The place, whose glories warm'd you. You are iust, 120 And worthy such a princely patrones loue,
 As was the worlds-renown'd GERMANICVS :
 Whose ample merit when I call to thought,

 Our peace, and safetie ? when our writings are,

 The prey to greedie vultures, and vile spies, 140
 That first, transfixe vs with their murdering eyes ?

L A T. Me thinkes, the Genius of the Romane race
 Should not be so extinct, but that bright flame
 Of libertie might be reuiu'd againe,

 And then depressing him, (as now of late
 In all reports we haue it) cannot be Emptie of practice : 'Tis T I B E R I V S arte.

TIBERIVS CÆSAR TO THE SENATE,

The Epistle is read.

GREETING.

546 IF you, Conscript Fathers, with your children, bee in health,
It is abundantly well : wee with our friends here, are so.
The care of the common-wealth, howsoever we are remoou'd in person, cannot be absent to our thought ; although, oftentimes, 550 euen to princes most present, the truth of their owne affaires is hid : then which, nothing fals out more miserable to a state, or makes the art of gouerning more difficult. But since it hath beene our ease-full happinesse to enioy both the aides, and in-dustrie of so vigilant a Senate, wee professe to haue beene the 555 more indulgent to our pleasures, not as being carelesse of our office, but rather secure of the necessitie. Neyther doe these common rumors of many, and infamous libels published against our retirement, at all afflict vs ; being born more out of mens ignorance, then their malice : and will, neglected, finde their 560 owne graue quickly ; whereas too sensibly acknowledg'd, it would make their obloquie ours. Nor doe we desire their authors (though found) bee censur'd, since in a free state (as ours) all men ought to enioy their mindes, and tongues free.

(A R R. The lapwing, the lapwing.)

565 Yet, in things, which shall worthily, and more neere concerne the maiestie of a prince, we shall feare to be so unnaturally cruell to our owne fame, as to neglect them. True it is, Conscript Fathers, that wee haue rayсед SEIANVS, from obscure, and almost vknown gentrie, (SEN. How ! how !) 570 to the highest, and most conspicuous point of greatnesse, and (wee hope) deseruingly ; yet, not without danger : it being a

(A R R. This touches, the blood turnes.)

But wee affie in your loues, and vnderstandings, and doe no way 575 suspect the merit of our S E I A N V S to make our fauours offensive to any.

Though we could haue wished his zeale had runne a calmer course against A G R I P P I N A, and our Nephewes, howsoever 580 the opennesse of their actions, declared them delinquents; and, that he would haue remembred, no innocence is so safe, but it reioyceth to stand in the sight of mercie: The vse of which in vs, hee hath so quite taken away, toward them, by his loyall furie, as now our clemencie would be thought but wearied crueltie, if we 585 should offer to exercise it.

(A R R. I thanke him, there I look'd for't. A good fox!) Some there bee, that would interpret this his publique seueritie to bee particular ambition; and that, vnder a pretext of seruice to vs, hee doth but remooue his owne lets: alleadging the strengths 590 he hath made to himselfe, by the Prætorian souldiers, by his faction in Court, and Senate, by the offices hee holdes himselfe, and conferres on others, his popularitie, and dependents, his vrging (and almost driuing) vs to this our unwilling retirement, and lastly his aspiring to be our sonne in-law. 595

(S E N. This 's strange!

A R R. I shall anon beleuee your vultures, M A R C V S.) Your wisdomes, Conscript Fathers, are able to examine, and censure these suggestions. But, were they left to our absolving voyce, we durst pronounce them, as we thinke them, most mali- 600 cious.

cise of place, or power, but till due and mature tryall be made of his innocency, which yet we can faintly apprehend the necessitie, 630 to doubt. If, Conscript Fathers, to your more searching wisdomes, there shall appeare farther cause (or of farder proceeding, either to seizure of lands, goods, or more——) it is not our power that shall limit your authoritie, or our fauour, that must corrupt your iustice : either were dishonourable in you, and 635 both vncharitable to our selfe. We would willingly be present with your counsailes in this businesse, but the danger of so potent a faction (if it should proue so) forbids our attempting it : except one of the Consuls would be intreated for our safetie, to undertake the guard of vs home, then wee should most readily 640 aduenture. In the meane time, it shall not bee fit for vs to importune so iudicious a Senate, who know how much they hurt the innocent, that spare the guiltie : and how gratefull & sacrifice, to the gods, is the life of an ingratefull person. We reflect not, in this, on SEIANVS (notwithstanding, if you keepe an 645 eye upon him——and there is LATIARIS a Senator, and PINNARIVS NATTA, two of his most trusted ministers, and so profest, whom we desire not to haue apprênded) but as the necessitie of the cause exacts it.

APPENDIX XI

JONSON'S HISTORICAL NOTES IN THE QUARTO

The elaborate series of marginal notes which Jonson printed in the Quarto are here transferred to an appendix in order to present the text clear as he left it. The notes were indicated by letters alphabetically for each page: thus, in the first line of the play:

SAB. Haile ^a*Caius Silius*. SIL. ^b*Titius Sabinus*, Hayle.
the notes appear in the right-hand margin thus:

^a De Caio	^b De Titio
Silio. vid.	Sabino. vid
Tacit. Lips.	Tac. lib. 4.
edit. 4 ^o .	pag. 79.
Anna. lib. I.
pag. II. lib.
2. pag. 28.
& 33.

In reprinting the letters have been dropped, and the words of the Quarto text to which the notes refer have been quoted, with the numbering of the lines. Slight corrections have been made in the punctuation: thus a hyphen, full stop, or comma omitted in the notes, especially on the outer edge of the margin, has been silently supplied, and no notice has been taken of the instances in which the printer has accented an 'i' instead of dotting it (for example, 'cupidine' in iv. 93). The chief errors corrected are: 'Hispane' (i. 64); 'an.' (i. 114); 'Vide.' 'lips.' 'Caracteres' (i. 150); 'Eudemo.' (i. 180); 'questione' (iii. 12); 'obscura.' (iii. 140); 'fædata' (iii. 182); 'apud.' (iii. 192); 'vitum' (iii. 463); 'Nepoti' (iii. 552); 'cup.' (iii. 673); 'proinquæ' (iv. 1); 'narrat.' (iv. 235); 'proiecta.' (iv. 309); 'Nat.' (iv. 363); 'Scen.' (v. 83); 'Ant.' (v. 127); 'Cons.' (v. 171, note to 'BE ALL PROFANE'); 'penituisse' (ib. note to 'while the Flamen washeth'); 'ad cum verum' (v. 177); 'cætus' (v. 182); 'lege.' and 'Synt.' (v. 183, note to 'takes of the Honey'); 'dówa' (ibid., note to 'the Milke'); 'offerrendis' (v. 184, note to 'Accept our Offring').

Great care is shown in citing the authorities. Only five errors have been noted: 'cap. 2.' (II. 472); 'pa. 85.' (III. 580); 'cap. 4.' (III. 669); 'lib. 18.' (IV. 174); 'De Sosia . . pa. 94' (v. 247). Possibly these are errors of the printer: certainly Jonson could not have stated, as the note on IV. 174 makes him do, that there were eighteen books of Tacitus' Annals. Considering the smallness of the type and the cramped position of the notes in the margin of the page, their general accuracy is surprising.

The incorrect Latin in the note on I. 571, 'vt . . . constet' is probably the printer's: 'vt constat' appears at v. 174.

NOTE.

Three further corrections in the Quarto text were found too late for insertion on page 334.

Sig. H 2	iv. 21	Neiee A, Br, 2, Dr, 2, 3	Neiee C (a miscorrec- tion)
Sig. M 3	v. 663	An honour . . . man, Br, 2, D2	(An honour . . . man) C, Dr, 3: missing in A
Sig. M 4 ^v	v. 765	Capitoll; . . . Circke, Br, D2	Capitoll, . . . Circke : B2, C, Dr, 3: missing in A

The Quarto which Jonson used for press-copy for the 1616 Folio cannot have contained the second of these corrections; it is a punctuation which he would have favoured. The bracket is twice used in the context which follows, at lines 672 and 677.

THE TEXT

The play of Eastward Ho was entered on the Stationers' Register by William Aspley and Thomas Thorpe on September 4, 1605. The entry is as follows :

iiiij^o Septembris

William Aspley	Entred for their Copies vnder the handes of
Thomas Thorp	Master Wilson and Master ffeild warden
	A Comedie called Eastward Ho : vj^d

Three editions of the play in quarto with the names of the authors and with the date 1605 were issued by William Aspley only. Similarly, on 5 July 1604, Aspley and Thorpe had registered Marston's Malcontent, but only Aspley's name appears in the imprint of the published work.

The title in the three Quartos is 'Eastward Hoe. As It was playd in the Black-friers. By The Children of her Maiesties Reuels. Made by Geo: Chapman. Ben: Ionson. Ioh: Marston. At London Printed for William Aspley.'

Collation of the First Quarto : A-I in fours, with the title on A, the Prologue on A verso, and the text beginning on A 2. In the running title some copies have at A 3 'ASTWARDED HOE', which was miscorrected to 'EASTWARDED HOE'.

There are two states of the First Quarto. The first state has leaves E 3 and E 4, with the famous gibe at the 'few industrious Scots' out in Virginia, in their original form (III. ii. 308-III. 113, 'And gird me so perhaps. . . Well, God pardon her, for my part, and I doe Ile be'). Mr. T. J. Wise's copy is the only one now known which preserves this passage in the text. But the two leaves have been inserted in the Dyce copy before the cancels which replaced them. Unfortunately Mr. Wise's copy has the title-page of the Third Quarto. The text of the present edition has been based upon this copy, marked 'A' in the list of variants below.

Six copies of the First Quarto in the second state with the cancels of E 3 and E 4 have been collated with it : namely—

The Dyce copy at South Kensington (= B in the list of variants).

The British Museum copy, with press-mark C 56. d. 32 (= C).

The Bodleian copy, Malone 765 (= D).

The copy belonging to Worcester College, Oxford (= E).

The Britwell copy, now in America (= F).

The Kemble copy, formerly at Chatsworth, now in the Henry E. Huntington library (= G).

Of these, the Dyce copy is made up: not only have the original E 3 and E 4 been inserted,¹ but F 4 has been supplied from a shorter copy.

The printer was George Eld. He is identified by the ornament on the title-page—two volutes with foliage.² This is found with Eld's name or initials in Camden's Remaines (for S. Waterson), 1605; The Returne from Parnassus (for John Wright), 1606; Dekker and Webster's North-ward Hoe, 1607; and Marston's What You Will (for Thomas Thorpe), 1607. Without Eld's name in the imprint, it is found in John Gordon's The Vnion of Great Brittain (for William Aspley), 1604; Sir R. Dallington's A Survey of the Great Dukes state of Tuscany (for Edward Blount), 1605; Chapman's Al Fooles (for Thomas Thorpe), 1605; and G. Merriton's A Sermon of Nobilitie (for Thomas Clarke), 1607.

A list of corrections made in this Quarto while it was passing through the press is given here. Lapses in punctuation are not recorded: sometimes a stop is clear in one copy, faint in another, and seemingly omitted in a third. These are bad printing, not deliberate changes, and usually they are not recorded.

The last line of F 3 verso, 'Sea. Not a pennie by heauen'. (iv. i. 147) is ranged with the catchword 'Pet'. As F 4 begins, 'Pet. Not a pennie betwixt us.' it looks as if the line were at first omitted because of the echoed words, but was restored to the text when the omission was noticed. The two pages do not balance. F 3 verso has forty lines, F 4 has only the normal thirty-nine.

Besides cancelling two leaves, the printer reset three pages earlier in the play—A 4 verso, containing i. ii. 21-54 ('thorough with veluet . . . my steele in-'), and C verso, C 2, containing ii. ii. 56-126 ('Your place maintain'd it . . . all in good part'). These belated attempts to clear the text of dangerous matter are of great interest, and may be studied in the facsimiles supplied in this edition (pp. 508-14).

In the first of these passages, i. ii. 21-54, nine lines have been excised from the text. Blank spaces are left between all the speeches, and the end of Girtrude's last speech (ii. 42-50) has lost the equivalent of three lines. Apparently the printer was responsible for this: any one of the authors, if he had been appealed to, could have supplied a stop-gap.

The printer, feeling that the cut would leave too much 'white', printed lines short in this deranged form:

Now (Ladies my comfort)
 What a prophane Apes here!
 Tailer, Poldavis, prethee fit it fit it: is this a right Scot?
 Does it clip close? and beare vp round?

A vestige of a gibe against the Scotch survives in the farthingale that 'clips close'. At the head of the scene is a very full stage-direction, beginning 'Enter Girtred, Mildrid, Bettrice, and Poldauy a Taylor, Poldauy with a faire gowne, Scotch Varthingall, and French fall in his arms', so that play was made with this particular property. Mildred enters sewing, '& Bettrice leading a Monkey after her'. Bettrice, who is apparently a waiting-woman and might have been utilized later in the scene (III. ii) where my Lady Flash takes coach, appears here only and makes a one-line remark (l. 65). 'The knights come forsooth'. No light is thrown on the inconsequent antics of the monkey: did Bettrice make it perform some trick at the mention of the word 'Scotch'? Tricks of this kind were fashionable, and some of the performers have been immortalized by Donne, Sir John Davies, and Ben Jonson.

He no more doth move
 Then . . . thou O Elephant or Ape wilt doe,
 When any names the King of Spain to you,

Donne writes in his first Satire (ll. 79-82),¹ and Jonson in the Induction to Bartholomew Fair refers to a juggler with 'a wel-educated Ape' that will 'come ouer the chaine, for the King of England, and backe againe for the Prince, and sit still on his arse for the Pope, and the King of Spaine!'²

² There is a possibility that a slight excision was made later in this scene at the foot of B verso and the top of B 2, after Touchstone's quotation

'The greatest riuers flow from little springs (I. ii. 127 foll.)

'Worke vpon that now.' follows close on the quotation; then a space equivalent to two lines is blank. The page ends with the stage-direction

The second tampering with the text—again the printer's, as it is the short and sharp remedy of leaving out lines—occurs at II. ii. 56–126. The opening passage contains some reflexion on the hollowness and treachery of Court life. Something has been excised before the first line of the passage, which is the top line of C verso: the catchword of the previous page does not tally with the text. C ends thus:

'Hyn. But ah-las Francke, how will all this bee maintain'd now?

Quick.

'Your place maintain'd it before.

Quicksilver. Why and I maintaine my place. Ile to the Court, . . .

The words 'Your place maintain'd it before' would naturally have been printed as the last line of C: they complete Sindey's speech.

On C verso there are blank lines between 77–8, 79–80; at 69 the printer has spun out seven monosyllables into a line by printing 'Syn.' in full and by wide spacing:

'Synnedefie. Well Francke, well; the Seas you say' Similarly in the last speech of C verso (ll. 91–2) he has spun out one line into two:

'Quicksilver. A pox on you, who taught you this morallitie?'

On C2 four lines are excised at lines 107–8, Quicksilver's speech 'I Dad . . . safest course', which has two blank lines before it and two blank lines after it.

Another sign of compression in this scene is the confusion of the stage-directions. The scene opens with the heading 'Securitie solus': he delivers a short speech, and then

'All but Touch-stone, Mildred, & Goulding depart'. B2 starts with a short line 'No, no: yon'd stand my hopes', followed up by a new turn in the action, though the speech is continuous: 'Mildred, come hither daughter.' But it is possible in this passage that the printer thought the long stage-direction rounded off the page better. An inconsistency in the text at III. i. 54, 64 may point to some revision: the sailors who are to conduct the Virginian voyage are Captain Seagull and his 'associates' Scapethrift and Spendall. But two speeches (ll. 54 and 64) are headed 'Spoyl'. Cf. vol. iii, p. 5.

'Enter Quicksiluer . . . gartering himselfe. Securitie following'. After line 28 we have a stage-direction 'Enter Syndefie, with Quicke-siluers doublet, Cloake, Rapier, and Dagger'; she takes part in the dialogue about the Court and is present at line 94 when Security addresses her, and at line 178, where Quicksilver broaches his scheme for utilizing 'my sweete Sinne here'. But after line 186 there is a pointless stage-direction 'Enter Sindefie'.

More significant than the preceding examples is the cancelling of the two leaves E 3 and E 4, because in these a satirical reference to the Scotch has been deleted and a short passage added later to fill the gap in the text. In the Bodleian copy E 3 and E 4 are on the same half sheet, and the stubs of the cancelled leaves, with enough of the inside margin to hold the stitches of E 1 and E 2, show between E 4 verso and F.¹ Evidently one or more of the authors had to be consulted over the changes made in this passage.

E 3 was reset. The line-arrangements are identical, but there are sixteen minor variants of spelling and punctuation on this page. In E 3 verso the original leaf had thirty-eight lines of text; the cancel has thirty-seven. Again there are small variants, but two sentences at the foot of E 3 verso and the top of E 4 were cut out. After a description of the gold and jewels of Virginia, its temperate climate and abundance of game, Captain Seagull touches on the freedom of the life there, and the absence of bailiffs, courtiers, lawyers, and informers: there is, however, one drawback—onely a few industrious Scots perhaps, who indeed are disperst ouer the face of the whole earth. But as for them, there are no greater friends to English-men and England when they are out an't, in the world, then they are. And for my part, I would a hundred thousand of 'hem were there, for wee are all one Countreymen now, yee know; and wee should finde ten times more comfort of them there, then wee doe heere.

This passage survives only in the Dyce and Wise copies.

When the printer left it out in the cancel, he shortened the page by one line and took over a line and a half from E 4. To fill the gap that still remained, two changes were made in the rest of the speech. The dangerous statement that in Virginia 'you may be a Noble man, and neuer be a Slaue' was toned down to harmless bathos—'You may be any other officer' than a City alderman; and a sentence which fills three and a half lines of the page was added at the end of the speech:

'Besides, there, we shall haue no more Law then Conscience, and not too much of either; serue God inough, eate and drinke inough, and inough is as good as a Feast.'

In the original E 4 the stage-direction after line 60 'Enter Sir Petronell' has a blank space equivalent to three lines above it and two lines below it. This unusual spacing may point to a still earlier cancel of which we have now no trace. The cancel shortens this gap, but makes a line in Petronel's speech by starting a new line with the words 'Come Drawer.' At the foot of the page it takes over a speech of two lines (ll. 77-8) from E 4 verso. On this last page the original thirty-nine lines are reduced to thirty-seven, and—in order to make the page even with F—a line is dropped before the stage-direction 'Enter Quikesiluer with Winny disguisd.'

The printer's timidity in removing dangerous matter has a literary significance by furnishing a clue to the authorship of the doctored scenes. Jonson told Drummond that Chapman and Marston, between them, had written 'something against the Scots' for which he had to take his share of responsibility when Sir James Murray 'delated' him to the King.¹

In none of the three passages does the context show a trace of Jonson's style and handling. The second scene of the first act is in the manner of Marston. The turn of the sentence 'to eate Cherries onely at an Angell a pound, good; to dye rich Scarlet black, pretty; to line a Grogaram gowne cleane thorough with veluet, tollerable' (ll. 19-21) was singled out by A. H. Bullen as Marstonian in the similar passage, i. i. 27-9 'I am intertaind among gallants, true: They call me coozen Franke, right; I lend them monnies, good; they spend it, well,' and illustrated from The Fawn. The sententious platitudes of Mildred also indicate the bourgeois morality of Marston:—'Where Titles presume to thrust before fit meanes to second them, Wealth and Respect often growe sullen and will not follow. For sure in this, I would for your sake I spake not truth. Where ambition of place goes before fitnessse of birth, contempt and disgrace follow.'¹ The second scene of the second act we have confidently assigned to Chapman.² The elaborate picture of the Court parasite (ll. 80-90) and the risks of the merchant-vessel with 'Shippes but Tennis Balles for the windes to play withall. . . . Nowe vnder-line; Nowe ouer the house; Sometimes Bricke-wal'd against a Rocke, . . . Sometimes strooke vnder the wide Hazzard' (ll. 63-7) is far removed from Jonson's manner, as the pungent quotation 'I heard my father say, I heard my mother sing an olde Song and a true: Thou art a shee foole, and know'st not what belongs to our male wisdom' (ll. 59-61) rises above the copy-book maxims which Marston puts on the lips of Touchstone. In the third scene of Act III the 'full and heightened style' of Chapman expresses itself even in the dishonest rhapsodies of Seagull, and the trick played on Bramble has its counterpart in All Fools.³

Two other quartos of Eastward Ho were printed by Eld and published by Aspley in 1605. The play is good reading, and deserved to be reprinted; moreover, the authors' imprisonment for it would serve as a piquant advertisement. The collation of both quartos is identical: A to H in fours, with the title on A, the Prologue on A verso, and the text beginning at A 2. The Second Quarto was set up from the First, and Eld, by resorting to a variety of economies, saved a sheet. He increased the number of lines to a page: the First Quarto normally has thirty-nine lines, increasing to forty (or their equivalent) in the last five pages ; the Second Quarto normally has forty lines to a page, increasing towards the end to forty-one and forty-two. One Bodleian copy of the Third Quarto, with wide margins—Malone 241 (6)—preserves the text intact, but even in this G verso and G 2, each with forty-two lines, have lost their catchwords, and the latter its signature ; and the signature and catchword of G 3 and the catchword of G 3 verso, each with forty-one lines, are cropped. On H 2 the last line is a short speech ('Mil. How now, M. Woolfe ?') together with the signature, which is moved to the right, and the catchword. Words of the text are ranged with the catchword also on H 2 verso and H 3. Further devices of Eld to secure compression were to space the words closer, so that he got more in a line, and to use the shorter forms of spelling and contraction-marks. Thus on A 2, the opening page of the text reproduced below, he has, as against the fuller spelling of the First Quarto, 'tel', 'shold', 'shal', 'hal', 'cal', and 'Aldermā', 'vpō', 'cōpanie', 'cozē'.

An important fact about the printing of the Second Quarto has been communicated to us privately by Dr. R. E. Brettell, the writer of a scholarly article in The Library, 4th series, volume ix, pages 287–302, 'Eastward Ho, 1605', dealing with the bibliography of the Quartos and the circumstances in which the play was produced. He has detected that the type of sheet I in the first edition was taken over in the second edition with a different line-adjustment for a wider page of type. This begins at Act v, scene iii, line 13 of the text, half-way down H recto of the Second Quarto. Wrong fount letters and stops supply some telling evidence : thus 'Sir' (iii. 31) ; 'Why.' (l. 38) ; broken 'o' and 'p' in 'Companie' (l. 46), though the capital is changed to lower case ; 'in Terrorem' (l. 76) ; a large wrong-fount 'M' in 'M. Francis' (l. 92), and 'M. Woolfe' (l. 95) ; a large wrong-fount comma after 'fortunate,' (l. 116). The songs in v. 49 ff. are taken over bodily, with the exception of one obvious misprint ('hcart' in line 151), which is corrected : they include such uses of wrong fount as 'dwel' (l. 50), 'VVestward' (l. 77), 'Farewel . . . farewel' (l. 113), where in the original printing the stock of italic 'w's' gave out ; and the tell-tale misprint '-But' (l. 71). Three variants correct the punctuation 'siluer ;' for 'siluer.' in iii. 49, and 'any' for 'any,' (v. 22) 'him.' for 'him,' (v. 110). Most of the others shorten the spelling : 'saw' for 'sawe', (iii. 15) ; 'whom' for 'whome' (l. 105) ; 'me' for 'mee' (l. 106) ; 'M.' for 'Mai.' (iv. 41) ; 'Bauds' for 'Baudes' (v. 25) ; 'proue' for 'prooue' (l. 73) ; 'Deputy' for 'Deputie' (l. 85). Once only there is an expansion, 'Hee' for 'He' (iii. 45), to fill the space at the end of a line. In iv. 8, the misprint 'our lamentations', which should be 'your', is taken over ; this is corrected in some copies of the First Quarto, and the other copies have a gap, showing a dropped letter : the printer of the Second Quarto copied the wrong reading and filled in the space.

Only two copies of this edition are recorded—that in the British Museum, with press-mark 644. d. 53, and Mr. W. A. White's copy, now in the Library of Harvard University.

The Third Quarto reproduces the Second page for page and, with very few exceptions, line for line. It also reproduces the errors of its predecessor. In ii. ii. 26 the First Quarto reads 'tis but as a scappe to the nette of villanie'. The Second Quarto omitted 'as' and meant to shorten the spelling of 'scappe' to 'scap', but misprinted it 'scap'. The Third Quarto has 'tis but a scape'. In ii. ii. 202-3 'we will instantly meet francke Maister Frances' (Q1) is converted to 'Francke, Maister Frances' in the two later Quartos. So in ii. ii. 355-6 'I must haue you of my faction now' is altered to 'of my fashion'. In iv. i. 172 a line is omitted by the Second and Third Quartos : 'Pet. On the coast of France, sir.' But the best example of a misreading is iv. i. 237-8 'I hope this is enough to put some spirit into the liuers of you'. The Second Quarto inverted the p of 'hope' so that it appeared as 'hode'; the Third Quarto emended to 'holde'.

The British Museum and the two Bodleian copies have been collated for this edition, and the Kemble copy up to the end of III. ii. Two copies in the Forster Collection at South Kensington have been examined for special readings. Some printers' errors have been noted in the Kemble copy, but in a third edition they have not the importance that attaches to the first attempt to print from the manuscript. The examples quoted in the critical apparatus are probably incomplete.

The Third Quarto was reproduced in collotype in Mr. John Stephen Farmer's Tudor Facsimile Texts. In this reproduction leaves G 2 and G 3 have been transposed: they are correctly placed in the British Museum copy from which the facsimile was made.

Eastward Ho stands apart from the canon of Jonson's works. He was only part author of the play; his share in it is disputable and can be traced only by that most fallacious of tests, the internal evidence of style. Further, he did not supervise the printing of the Quarto, though he may have been consulted, or he may even have intervened, to ensure that the allusions which provoked the King's anger were omitted from the text. But the play will not require consideration in the critical survey of Jonson's acknowledged work which will precede the commentary, and therefore the later history of the text is added here.

The first of the later editions is in Robert Dodsley's A Select Collection of Old Plays, 1744, volume iv, pages 147-228. The text is taken from the Third Quarto; for example, it prints 'stamen' for 'Stammell' in I. ii. 15. Dodsley prefixed a list of characters and made a number of errors and a few attempts at correction. Of the errors it is sufficient to note 'ruffians! ha!' for 'Ruffins hall' (I. i. 18), 'showle quoth the caliver' (II. i. 89), 'cuz' for 'Cu' (II. ii. 204, 206), 'untruss' for 'infuse' (IV. i. 238). Some slight corrections are recorded in the critical apparatus of the present text at III. ii. 162, v. i. 28, 130, 131.

A 'second edition, corrected and collated with the old copies' was issued by James Dodsley in 1780. It was edited by Isaac Reed. Eastward Ho is in the fourth volume on pages 199–302. On page 250 Reed reprinted for the first time the cancelled gibe against the Scots in III. iii. 41–8. So he used a copy of the First Quarto. He added a final note on page 302, stating that he afterwards found two copies of the play which omitted the gibe. 'The Editions in every other respect appear to be the same. I therefore conclude, that after the publication a sheet was cancelled in order to leave out the passage which offended King James the First'. Reed collated his First Quarto very superficially. Most of the erroneous Third Quarto readings of Dodsley are retained and most of his errors. Of further errors added by Reed the chief is 'ladies' for 'lacquaies' in v. i. 37.

Dodsley's Collection next appeared in 1825, 'A new edition: with additional notes and corrections, by the late Isaac Reed, Octavius Gilchrist, and the Editor'. The editor was John Payne Collier. The play is in the fourth volume on pages 199–302. Collier corrected a few of Dodsley's errors, but retained most of them. He had seen a copy of the First Quarto, but he was incapable of distinguishing it from the Third Quarto, though he noted one or two variant readings. He annotates iv. ii. 288: 'One quarto of 1605 reads, "O good Sir" and the other, "O God Sir"'. 'God' is the reading of the First Quarto, 'good' the reading of the Third. On III. ii. 262 'with his sterne vsurous Ielosie', he writes, 'Both the quartos have it, "With eyes stern usurious jealousy", which may be right though the sense is rather forced.' 'Eyes' in this passage is a misprint of the First Quarto, subsequently corrected but reappearing in the Second and Third Quartos. Collier's worst textual note is on II. ii. 25–6, 'if vertue bee vsde, tis but as a scappe to the nette of villanie'. He reads 'scape' and comments, 'The sense of this passage has been entirely lost by printing 'scape, scrap, which is totally without warrant'. The reading of the First Quarto is 'scappe': the Second Quarto misprinted 'scap', a mere printer's error in dropping the r. The Third Quarto printed what it imagined to be the more correct form 'scape', and Dodsley took his text from this Quarto. Reading 'scrap' and making due allowance for Chapman's compressed and difficult style—he is pretty certainly the author of this scene—we interpret, 'Virtue, if it is used at all, serves only as a bait to lead the victim into the net'.¹ 'Scape' makes no sense whatever.

The edition in The Ancient British Drama, 1810, vol. ii, pp. 66–99, reproduces Dodsley's 1780 text, with a few additional errors, such as Fōus for Eōus in i. i. 110.

In 1856 J. O. Halliwell-Phillipps included the play in his edition of The Works of John Marston, vol. iii, pp. 1–102. The text is taken from the Third Quarto and reproduces a number of its errors: for example, i. ii. 15 'stamen', ii. ii. 60 'a nold song', ibid. 202–3 'Francke, Maister Francis', iii. ii. 267 'jopes' (for 'ioyes'). The editor modernized the use of capital letters and italics and the punctuation of the Quarto. A sample of his meddling with the last two points may be quoted from iii. ii. 147–8, which he prints in the form: 'No, o now, I must depart. "Parting though it absence move"'. Richard Herne Shepherd included the play in his modernized edition of The Works of George Chapman: Plays, 1874, pp. 449–85. It is a faithful reproduction of the Third Quarto, with a few additional errors due to Shepherd's modernizing of the old punctuation, which he did not understand: for example, ii. i. 89 'show's quoth the caliuier'; iii. ii. 85–6 'God give you joy, mistress! What lack you?' (for 'Mistress What-lack-you', i.e. 'Goody Tradeswoman'); In ii. ii. 174 'euer does it', he omits the 'it', and in v. ii. 66–7 'If I should giue any farder eare, I were taken', he misprints 'care'.

A. H. Bullen, editing the play in The Works of John

¹ See the forms 'scrape', 'scrap', 'shrape', and 'shrap' in the Oxford Dictionary and the Dialect Dictionary. It is still used in dialect; e.g. East Anglian Glossary, 1895, 'Shrap or Scrap, a bait of chaff laid in the winter season to attract sparrows, &c., which are then netted with a contrivance called a "shrap net"'.

Marston, 1887, vol. iii, pp. 1-124, evidently used Shepherd's text for printer's copy, and corrected it from a copy of the Third Quarto. He reproduces, however, Shepherd's misprints quoted above. In a note on III. ii. 262, quoting a note of Collier's that 'both the quartos' read 'With eyes stern usurous jealousy', he interpolates a comment in brackets, 'there is only one'. Bullen often prepared his texts in the Dyce Library, in those days a secluded room at the South Kensington Museum, and he seems on one occasion at least to have stumbled unconsciously on a copy of the First Quarto. In a note on IV. ii. 237, 'to the value of 500. pound', he writes 'Old ed. "so"'. The Dyce copy does read 'so', but this is corrected in all other copies of the First Quarto. The Second and Third Quartos read 'to'. In the epilogue, for 'the streets and the Fronts of the Houses . . . stucke with People', he misprints 'thick with people', and he misunderstands the old punctuation, twisting I. i. 114-15 into 'Eastward, bully, this satin belly, and canvas-backed Touchstone: 'slife! man, his father was a maltman', and reproducing Shepherd's foolish blunder in III. ii. 85-6.

The first modern editor to know that more than one quarto was printed in 1605 was Professor Felix E. Schelling, who edited Eastward Ho along with The Alchemist in 1904. He based his text on the second state of the First Quarto,¹ which he collated with the Dyce copy and with the Third Quarto. He did not know of the Second Quarto. He kept the old spelling, but modernized the punctuation on the ground that it was 'probably Aspley's'. The text is carefully done, but the repunctuation is questionable in such passages as I. i. 114-15, where he follows Bullen, and in III. ii. 135-6 'and therefore, till I speake, to you—gallantry indeed—I will saue my breath for my broth anon'.

Professor J. W. Cunliffe edited the play for Professor C. M. Gayley's Representative English Comedies, 1913, vol. iii, ¹ Much confusion is caused in all the later texts by editors describing the two states of the First Quarto as 'Q1' and 'Q2'.

pp. 395–501. His text is from the First Quarto, with collations of the Second and the Third. He is the only editor who knew of the Second Quarto. He modernizes capitals and punctuation. His edition is the best which has so far appeared.

Professor T. M. Parrott included the play in his edition of The Plays and Poems of George Chapman: The Comedies, 1913, pp. 461–535. His text is from the First Quarto, with full collations of the Third. He has not realized that E 3 and E 4 are cancels, but believes that the printer reset only the two pages, E 3 verso and E 4 recto.

The latest edition of Eastward Ho is that of Dr. Julia Hamlet Harris, published in the Yale Studies in English, 1926, vol. lxxiii. The text is set up from a photograph of the Dyce copy of the First Quarto. The editor is not aware that this is a made-up copy. It is reproduced without the signatures or any clue to the paging, so that the original text of E 3 and E 4 is followed abruptly by the text of the cancel, without even a warning note in the critical apparatus. There are a few slight inaccuracies in the text, and the critical apparatus is confused and unsatisfactory. Dr. Harris is mistaken in supposing that the Third Quarto 'lacks' a line of the text at the foot of signatures G verso and G 2 recto: the copies she used were badly cropped.

The so-called edition of the play in W. R. Chetwood's Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Ben. Jonson, Esq. . . . To which are added, Two Comedies, (wrote by Ben Jonson, &c. and not printed in his Works) called The Widow, and Eastward Hoe (Dublin, 1756) is really a stage adaptation, sprinkled with manager's 'cuts' and interpolations. Chetwood exploited Dodsley's text for this purpose.

It should perhaps be noted that conjectural emendations have been introduced into the present text at II. ii. 121, III. ii. 257, 279.

Touch. Thou shamlesse Varlet dost thou iest at thy lawfull maister contrary to thy Indentures ?

Quick. (Why zbloud sir, my mother's a Gentlewoman, and my father a Iustice of Peace, and of Quorum : and tho I am

30 are spent, must not they striue to get more ? must not their land flye ? and to whom ? shall not your worship ha' the refusall ? Well, I am a good member of the Cittie if I were well considered. How would Merchants thriue, if Gentlemen would not be vnthriftes ? How could Gentlemen be 35 vnthrifts if their humours were not fed ? How should their humours be fedde but by whit-meate, and cunning secondings ? Well, the Cittie might consider vs. I am going to an Ordinary now ; the gallants fall to play, I carry light golde with me : the gallants call Coozen Franke some golde for 40 siluer, I change, gaine by it, the gallants loose the gold ; and then call Coozen Franke lend me some siluer,) Why—— Tou. Why ? (I cannot tell, seuen score pound art thou out in the cash, but looke to it, I will not be gallanted out of my monies. And as for my rising by other mens fall ; God shield 45 me. Did I gaine my wealth by Ordinaries ? no : by exchanging of gold ? no : by keeping of gallants company ? no. I hired me a little shop, fought low, tooke small gaine, kept no debt booke, garnished my shop for want of Plate, with good wholesome thriftie sentences ; As, Touchstone, when I was wiu'd, hauing something to stick too, I had the horne of Suretiship euer before my eyes : You all know the deuise of the Horne, where the young fellow slippes in at the Butte end, and comes squesd out at the Buckall : and I 55 grew vp, and I praise prouidence, I beare my browes now as high as the best of my neighbours : but thou——well looke to the accounts, your fathers bond lyes for you : seuen score pound is yet in the reere.)

Quick. Why slid sir, I haue as good, as proper gallants 60 wordes for it as any are in London, Gentlemen of good phrase, perfect language, passingly behau'd, Gallants that weare socks and cleane linnen, and call me kinde coozen Francke, good coozen Francke, for they know my Father ; and by gods lidde shall not I trust 'hem ? not trust ? 65

Touch-stone. I marry Sir, there's a youth of another peece. (There's thy fellowe-Prentise, as good a Gentleman borne as thou art : nay, and better mean'd. But dos he pumpe it, or 70 Racket it ? Well, if he thriue not, if he out-last not a hundred such crackling Bauins as thou art, God and men neglect industrie.)

 tayle. So farre is she ill naturde to the place and meanes of my preferment and fortune, that shee throwes all the contempt and dispight, hatred it selfe can cast vpon it. Well, 90 a peece of Land she has, 'twas her Grandmothers gift : let her, and her Sir Petronel, flash out that. But as for my substance, shee that skornes mee, as I am a Citizen and Tradesman, shall neuer pamper her pride with my industrie : shall neuer vse me as men doe Foxes ; keepe themselues warme

Gir. I, in a countrie Ladie I hope it is: as I shall be. And how chauce ye came no sooner knight?

Sir Pet. Faith, I was so intertained in the Progresse with one Count Epernoum a welch knight: wee had a match at Baloone too, with my Lord Whachum, for foure crownes. 80

Gir. At Baboone? Iesu! you and I will play at Baboone in the countrey, Knight?

Sir Pet. O sweet Lady: tis a strong play with the arme.

Gir. With arme, or legge, or any other member, if it bee a court-sport. And when shal's be married my Knight? 85

Sir Pet. I come now to consumate it; and your father may call a poore Knight, Sonne in Law.

Myl. I had rather make vp the garment of my affections in some of the same peece, then like a foole weare gownes of two coulours, or mix Sackcloth with Sattin.

Gold. And doe the costly garments, the title and fame of 60 a Lady, the fashion, obseruation, and reuerence proper to such preferment, no more enflame you, then such conuenience as my poore meanes and industrie can offer to your vertues ?

Mil. I haue obseru'd that the bridle giuen to those violent
 65 flatteries of fortune, is seldome recouer'd ; they beare one headlong in desire from one noueltie to another : and where those ranging appetites raigne, there is euer more passion then reason : no staye, and so no happinesse. These hastie aduancements are not naturall ; Nature hath giuen vs

Quicksiluer. O wittie Age, where age is young in witte,
And al youths words haue gray beards full of it !

55 Syn. But ah-las Francke, how will all this bee maintain'd now ? Your place maintain'd it before.

Quicksiluer. Why and I maintaine my place. Ile to the Court, another manner of place for maintenance I hope then the silly Citty. I heard my father say, I heard my mother 60 sing an olde Song and a true : Thou art a shee foole, and know'st not what belongs to our male wisdom. I shall bee a Marchaunt for-sooth : trust my estate in a wooden Trough as hee does ? What are these Shippes, but Tennis Balles for the windes to play withall ? Tost from one wau to another ;

finde 'hem tenne times fuller of hazzard ; wherein to see what is to bee seene, is torment more then a free Spirite

Iniuries swallowe you ? What care and deuotion must you 75 vse, to humour an imperious Lord ? proportion your lookes to his lookes ? <your> smiles to his smiles ? fit your sayles to the winde of his breath ?

Quick. Tush hee's no Iourney-man in his craft, that cannot doe that.

Quickesiluer. A pox on you, who taught you this morallitie ?

Securitie. Tis long of this wittie Age, Maister Francis. But indeede, Mistris Synnedefie, all Trades complaine of in-conuenience, and therefore tis best to haue none. The 95
Marchaunt hee complaines, and sayes, Trafficke is subiect to much vncertaintie and losse : let 'hem keepe their goods on dry land with a vengeaunce, and not expose other mens substances to the mercie of the windes, vnder protection of a wooden wall (as Maister Francis sayes) and all for greedie 100 desire, to enrich themselues with vnconscionable gaine, two for one, or so : where I, and such other honest men as liue by lending money, are content with moderate profite ; Thirtie, or Fortie i'th'hundred : so wee may haue it with quietnesse, and out of perrill of winde and weather, rather 105 then runne those daungerous courses of trading, as they doe.

Quick. (I Dad, thou mayst well bee called Securitie, for thou takest the safest course)

Securitie. Faith the quieter, and the more contented ; and, out of doubt, the more godly. For Marchants in their 110 courses are neuer pleas'd, but euer repining against Heauen : One prayes for a Westerly winde to carry his shippe foorth ; another for an Easterly to bring his shippe home ; and at euery shaking of a leafe, hee falles into an agonie, to thinke

Petr. Ile out of this wicked towne as fast as my horse can trot : Here's now no good action for a man to spend his time in. Petr. O Francke ! my castle ? Alas all the Castles I haue, are built with ayre, thou know'st.

Quic. I know it Knight, and therefore wonder whether your Lady is going.

Pet. Faith to seeke her Fortune I thinke. I said I had a 230 castle and land Eastward, and Eastward she will without contradiction ; her coach, and the coach of the Sunne must meeete full butt : And the Sunne being outshined with her Ladyships glorie, she feares hee goes Westward to hange himselfe. 235

Quic. And I feare, when her enchanted Castle becomes inuisible, her Ladyship will returne and follow his example.

250 moditie (if you will) I know he will procure you.

Petr. Commoditie ! Alas what commoditie ?

Qui. Why Sir, what say you to Figges, and Raysons ?

Petr. A plague of Figges and Raysons, and all such fraile commodities, we shall make nothing of 'hem.

255 Quic. Why then Sir, what say you to Fortie pound in roasted Beefe ?

Petr. Out vpon 't, I haue lesse stomacke to that, then to the Figges and Raysons : Ile out of Towne, though I so-265 the two Counters they like best, for by the Lord I like none of 'hem.

Petr. Well Francke there is no iesting with my earnest necessitie ; thou know'st if I make not present money to further my voyage begun, all's lost, and all I haue laid out Secur. The writings are ready Sir. My learned counsell here, Maister Bramble the Lawyer, hath perusde them ; and within this houre, I will bring the Scriuenour with them to your worshipfull Lady.

Petr. Good Maister Bramble, I will here take my leaue of ³⁵ you then ; God send you fortunate Pleas sir, and contentious Clients.

Bram. And you foreright windes Sir, and a fortunate voyage.

Exit.

Enter a Messenger.

40 Mess. Sir Petronell, here are three or foure Gentlemen desire to speake with you.

Pet. What are they ?

Qui. They are your followers in this voyage Knight, Captaine Seagull and his associates, I met them this morning, 45 and told them you would be here.

Pet. Let them enter I pray you, I know they long to bee gone, for their stay is dangerous.

Enter Seagull, Scapethrift, and Spendall.

Sea. God saue my honourable Collonell.

Pet. Welcome good Captaine Seagull, and worthy Gentle-
50 men, if you will meete my friend Francke here, and me, at the Blew Anchor Tauerne by Billinsgate this Euening, we will there drinke to our happy voyage, be merry, and take Boate to our Ship with all expedition.

Spoyl. Deferre it no longer I beseech you Sir, but as your 55 voyage is hetherto carried closely, and in another Knights name, so for your owne safetie and ours, let it be continued, our meeting and speedy purpose of departing knowne to as few as is possible, least your Ship and goods be attacht.

Qui. Well aduisd Captaine, our Collonell shall haue money
60 this morning to dispatch all our departures, bring those Gentlemen at night to the place appointed, and with our skinnes full of vintage, wee take occasion by the vantage, and away.

Spoyl. We will not faile but be there sir.

65 Pet. Good morrow good Captaine, and my worthy associates. Health and all Soueraigntie to my beautifull gossip : for you sir, we shall see you presently with the writings.

Secur. With writings and crownes to my honorable gossip :
I do hunger and thirst to doe you good sir. Exeunt.

Actus tertii, Scēna Secunda.

Enter a Coachman in hast in's frock feeding.

Coach. Heer's a stirre when Cittizens ride out of Towne indeed, as if all the house were a fire : Slight they will not giue a man leaue, to eat's breakfast afore he rises.

Enter Hamlet a footeman in haste.

Ham. What Coachman ? my Ladyes Coach for shame ; her ladiships ready to come downe. 5

Enter Potkinn, a Tankerd bearer.

Pot. Sfoote Hamlet ; are you madde ? whether run you now you should brushe vp my olde Mistresse ?

Enter Syndefye.

Synd. What Potkinn ? you must put off your Tankerd, and put on your blew cote and waite vpon Mistrisse Tooche-stone into the country. Exit. 10

Pot. I will forsooth presently. Exit.

Enter Mistresse Fond, and Mistresse Gazer.

Fond. Come sweete Mistresse Gazer, lets watch here, and see my Lady Flashe take coach.

Gaz. A my word heer's a most fine place to stand in, did you see the new Ship lancht last day Mistresse Fond ? 15

Fond. O God, and we cittizens should loose such a sight ?

Gaz. I warrant, here will be double as many people to see her take coach, as there were to see it take water.

Fond. O shee's married to a most fine Castle i'th' countrey they say. 20

Gaz. But there are no Gyants in the Castle, are there ?

95 not your Ladiship an't please your worship, Madam.

Mist. Touch. No, nor she must not call thee Father by Heraldrie, because thou mak'st thy Prentise thy Sonne as wel as she ; Ah thou misproude Prentise, dar'st thou presume to marry a Ladies Sister ?

100 Gou. It pleas'd my Master forsooth to embolden me with his fauour : And though I confesse my selfe farre vnworthie so worthy a wife (beeing in part, her seruant, as I am your Prentise) yet (since I may say it without boasting) I am borne a Gentleman, and by the Trade I haue learn'd of my

Pet. O tedious Voyage, whereof there is no ende !
What will they thinke of me ? 185

Quick. Thinke what they list ; They long'd for a vagarie into the Countrie, and now they are fitted : So a woman marry to ride in a Coach, she cares not if she ride to her Ruine ; Tis the great ende of many of their mariages :
This is not <the> first time a Lady has ridde a false iournie 190 in her Coach I hope.

Pet. Nay, tis no Matter, I care little what they thinke ;
hee that wayes mens thoughts, has his handes full of nothing :
A man in the course of this worlde should bee like a Surgeons instrument, worke in the woundes of others, and feele 195 nothing himselfe. The sharper, and subtler, the better.

I, in the meane time, will send this my friende
 Home to his house, to bring his wife disguis'd
 Before his face, into our companie :
 For Loue hath made her looke for such a wile,
 To free her from his tyrannous Ielosie. 240
 And I would take this course before another :
 In stealing her away to make vs sport,
 And gull his circumspection the more grosely.
 And I am sure that no man like your selfe,
 Hath credite with him to entice his Ielosie 245
 To so long staye abroad, as may giue time
 To her enlardgment, in such safe disguise.

Secur. A toye, a toy runns in my head yfaith.

Quick. A pox of that head, is there more toyes yet ?

Pet. What is it pray thee Gossip ?

Secur.

Why Sir ? what if you

320 Should slip away now with my wiues best gowne,

I hauing no securitie for it ?

Quick. For that I hope Dad you wil take our words.

Secu. I by th' masse your word, thats a proper staffe with a Drawer.*

Sea. Come Drawer, pierce your neatest Hogsheades, & lets haue cheare, not fit for your Billingsgate Tauerne ;
but for our Virginian Colonel ; he wilbe here instantly.

Draw. You shall haue all things fit sir ; please you haue any more Wine ? 5

Spend. More wine Slaue ? whether we drinke it or no, spill it, and drawe more.

Scap. Fill all the pottes in your house with all sorts of licour, and let 'hem waite on vs here like Souldiers in their Pewter coates ; And though we doe not employe them now, 10 yet wee will maintaine 'hem, till we doe.

Draw. Said like an honourable Captaine ; you shall haue all you can commaund Sir. Exit Drawer.

Sea. Come boyes, Virginia longs till we share the rest of her Maiden-head. 15

Spend. Why is she inhabited already with any English ?

Sea. A whole Country of English is there man, bred of those that were left there in 79. They haue married with the Indians, and make 'hem bring forth as beautiful faces as any we haue in England : and therefore the Indians are so in 20 loue with 'hem, that all the treasure they haue, they lay at their feete.

Scap. But is there such treasure there Captaine, as I haue heard ?

Sea. I tell thee, Golde is more plentifull there then Copper 25 is with vs : and for as much redde Copper as I can bring, Ile haue thrice the waight in Golde. Why man all their

Sea. As euer the Sunne shinde on : temperate and full of all sorts of excellent viands ; wilde Boare is as common there, as our tamest Bacon is here : Venison, as Mutton.

are so foolish ? What desperate yong Swaggerer would haue bin abroad such a wether as this, vpon the water ? Ay me, see another remnant of this vnfortunate ship-wrack ! or some other. A woman ! yfaith, a woman, though it be 60 almost at S. Kath'rins, I discerne it to be a woman, for al her bodie is aboute the water, & her clothes swim about her most handsomely. O they beare her vp most brauely ! has not a woman reason to loue the taking vp of her cloathes the better while she liues, for this ? Alas, how busie the rude 65 Thames is about her ? A pox a' that wave. It wil drowne

Wynn. Vnhappy that I am, I was.

Draw. I am glad it was my good happe to come downe thus farre after you, to a house of my friends heere in S. 85 Kath'rines, since I am now happily made a meane to your rescue, from the ruthlesse tempest ; which (when you tooke Bote) was so extreame, and the Gentleman that brought you forth, so desperate and vnsobber, that I fear'd long ere this I should heare of your ship-wracke, and therefore (with 90 little other reason) made thus farre this way : And this I must tell you, since perhappes you may make vse of it, there was left behinde you at our Tauerne, brought by a Porter (hyr'd by the yong Gentleman that brought you), a Gentlewomans Gowne, Hat, Stockings, and Shooes ; which if they 95 be yours, and you please to shift you, taking a hard bed here, in this house of my friend, I will presently goe fetch you.

Wynn. Thanks my good friend, for your more then good newes. The Gowne with all things bounde with it are myne ; which if you please to fetch as you have promist, I will 100 bouldly receiue the kinde fauour you haue offered, till your returne : intreating you, by all the good you haue done in preseruing me hitherto, to let none take knowledge of what fauour you doe me, or where such a one as I am bestowed, lest you incurre mee much more damage in my fame, then 105 you haue done me pleasure in preseruing my life.

Draw. Come in Lady, and shift your selfe ; resolute, that nothing, but your owne pleasure, shall bee vsde in your discouery.

 In which vnsufferable Shame and Miserie
 Will not attend them ? I will walke this Banck,

God saue your Ladiship ; 'saue your good Ladiship :
 your Ladiship is welcome from your enchanted Castell ; so are your beautious Retinew. I heare your Knight errant is trauayld on strange aduentures : Surely in my minde, your 115 Ladiship hath fish'd faire, and caught a Frog, as the saying is.

Mist. Tou. Speake to your Father, Madam, & kneele

Gyrt. Kneele ? I hope I am not brought so low yet :
 though my Knight be run away, & has sold my land, I am a 120 Lady, stil.

Touch. Your Ladiship says true, Madam, & it is fitter, and a greater decorum, that I should curtsie to you, that are a knights wife, and a Lady, then you be brought a' your knees to me, who am a poore Cullion, and your Father.

125 Gyr. Law ! my father knowes his duty.

Mist. Tou. O child !

Touch. And therefore I doe desire your Ladiship, my good Lady Flash, in all humility, to depart my obscure Cottage, and returne in quest of your bright, and most trans-130 parent Castell, how euer presently conceald to mortall eyes.
 And as for one poore woman of your traine here, I will take that order, she shall no longer be a charge vnto you, nor helpe to spend your Ladiship ; she shall stay at home with me, and not goe abroad, not put you to the pawning of an

And night to be so beaten.

Enter Mistris Touchstone.

110 O, heer's my Mother ! good lucke, I hope. Ha' you brought any money, Mother ? Pray you Mother, your Blessing. Nay, sweet Mother, doe not weepe.

Mistris Touch. God blesse you ; I would I were in my Graue.

115 Gyr. Nay, deare Mother, can you steale no more money from my father ? dry your eyes, & comfort me. Alas, it is my Knights fault, and not mine, that I am in a Wast-coate, and attyred thus simply.

Woolfe. Beleeue it Sir, you need feare no packing here. These are but Letters of Submission, all.

Touch. Sir, I doe looke for no Submission. I will beare my 10 selfe in this like Blinde Iustice, Worke vpon that now. When the Sessions come, they shall heare from me.

Gould. From whom come your Letters, M<aister> Woolfe?

Woolfe. And't please you Sir. One from Sir Petronell. Another from Francis Quickesiluer. And a third, from old 15 Securitie, who is almost madde in Prison. There are two, to your worship : One from M<aister> Francis, Sir. Another from the Knight.

Touch. I doe wonder, M<aister> Woolfe, why you should trauaile thus, in a businesse so contrarie to kinde, or the 20 nature o' your Place ! that you beeing the Keeper of a Prison, should labour the release of your Prisoners ! Qui. I writ it, when my spirits were opprest.

Pet. I, Ile be sworne for you Francis.

Quick. It is in imitation of Maningtons; he that was hangd at Cambridge, that cut of the Horses head at a blow. 45

Frie. So sir.

Quick. To the tune of [I waile in woe, I plunge in paine.]

Pet. An excellent Ditty it is, and worthy of a new tune.

Qui. (In Cheapside famous for Gold & Plate,

Quicksiluer I did dwel of late : 50

I had a Master good, and kind,

That would haue wrought me to his mind.

He bad me still, Worke vpon that, .

But alas I wrought I knew not what.

He was a Touchstone black, but true : 55

And told me still, what would ensue,

Yet, woe is me, I would not learne,

I saw, alas, but could not discerne.)

Frien. Excellent, excellent well.

Gould. O let him alone, Hee is taken already. 60

 Thou cutst a Horse-head off at a blow : 95
 But I confesse, I haue not the force
 For to cut off the head of a horse,
 Yet I desire this grace to winne,
 That I may cut off the Horse-head of Sin,
 And leaue his body in the dust 100
 Of sinnes high way and bogges of Lust,
 Wherby I may take Vertues purse,
 And liue with her for better, for worse.

Frin. Admirable sir, & excellently conceited.

Quic. Alas sir. 105

Touch. (Sonne Goulding & M^aister) Wolfe, I thank you :
 the deceit is welcome, especially from thee whose charitable soule in this hath shewne a high point of wisdom and honesty. Listen. I am rauished with his Repentance, and could stand here a whole prentiship to heare him. 110

Frien. Forth good sir.

Quick. This is the last, and the Farewell.
 Farewel Cheapside, farewell sweet trade
 Of Goldsmithes all, that neuer shall fade :
 Farewell, deare fellow Prentises all, 115
 And be you warned by my fall :
 Shun Vsurers, Bauds, and dice, and drabs,
 Auoide them as you would French scabs.
 Seeke not to goe beyonde your Tether,
 But cut your Thongs vnto your Lether : 120
 So shall you thriue by little and little,
 Scape Tiborne, Counters, & the Spittle.

Alasse, I am a Cuckold :
And, why should it be so ?
Because I was a Vsurer
And Bawd, as all you know,

Gyr. Ah Runaway, Runaway ! haue I caught you ? And, how has my poore Knight done all this while ? 160

Pet. Deare Lady-wife, forgiue me.

Gert. (As heartely, as I would be forgiuen, Knight. Deare Father, giue me your blessing, and forgiue me too ; I ha' bene proud, and lasciuious, Father ; and a Foole, Father ; and being raisd to the state of a wanton coy thing, calld a 165 Lady, Father ; haue scorn'd you, Father ; and my Sister ; & my Sisters Veluet Cap, too ; and would make a mouth at the Citty, as I ridde through it ; and stop mine eares at Bow-bell : I haue said your Beard was a Base one, Father ; and that you look'd like Twierpipe, the Taberer ; and that 170 my Mother was but my Midwife.

Touch. No more Repetitions. What is else wanting, to make our Harmony full ?

Quic. With all my heart.

Gould. And Security giue her a dower, which shall be all the restitution he shall make of that huge masse, he hath so vnlawfully gotten. 180

Touch. Excellently deuisd ! a good motion ! What sayes Maister Securitie ?

Secu. I say any thing sir, what you'll ha me say. Would I were no Cuckold.

Wini. Cuckold, husband ? why, I thinke this wearing of 185 Yellow has infected you.

Touch. Why, Maister Securitie, that should rather be a comfort to you, then a corasiue. If you be a Cuckold, it's an argument you haue a beautifull woman to your wife ; then,

EPILOGVS.

〈Quick.〉 Stay Sir, I perceiue the multitude are gathered together, to view our comming out at the Counter. See, if the streets and the Fronts of the Houses, be not stucke with People, and the Windowes fild with Ladies, as on the solemne day of the Pageant!

O may you find in this our Pageant, here,
The same contentment, which you came to seeke ;
And as that Shew but drawes you once a yeare,
May this attract you, hether, once a weeke. 〈Exeunt.〉

ADDITIONAL NOTES TO VOLUME III

Page 96, l. 6. The printer of The Case is Altered was Nicholas Okes, who began printing in 1600. He used the device of the framed fleur-de-lis with the motto 'In Domino confido' in Six godlie Treatises necessarie for Christian instruction, 1608, printed for Leonard Becket; Taylor his Trauels to the Citty of Prague, 1620, printed for Henry Gosson; and Camden's Remaines Concerning Britaine, 1623, printed for Simon Waterson.

Pages 96-9. The list of variants in the 1609 Quarto of The Case is Altered should be revised, as Mr. McIlwraith has pointed out, by grouping the corrections in accordance with the forme.

In the outer forme of B, D represents the uncorrected state. Corrections were made in the other copies, but (1) in i. ix. 57 (B 4 verso) the error 'sound' was overlooked in G, and (2) in i. vi. 71 (B recto) a final correction 'No?' was made in A: this reading should have been placed in the text.

In the inner forme of C, A and E are the uncorrected copies. The variant in i. x. 25, where A, E read 'soule.' is probably due to defective type or uneven inking. The reading of G, which is now in America, was not noted when the editor collated it.

In the inner forme of D, the reading of B, C, E in ii. iv. 46 (D verso), 'cerimon y', is merely a disturbance of the type during the printing.

In the outer forme of F, the readings of iv. i. 67 are incorrectly given. 'Chamount.' is the reading of all copies but B, which gives the correction 'Chamont.' Throughout this forme A is uncorrected; the other copies are corrected except in the above passage.
